Mr. Robot - September 11, 2018, 3:15 pm

I'm sure yall have heard if you in those areas at this point but in case you are anywhere near i'd say expect anything to happen even further south and north.

This shit will literally destroy everything over there - Yall aint ready.

Best of luck my HF buddies.

It's about to reap absolute havoc on the east coast.

Hope everyone evacuates near landfall, cause it's coming without mercy.

Yeah I been watching this all week.

It's not looking good for the ones on the east coast.

The news is saying we could get the tail end of this here in Ohio.

Without a doubt, I would say so.

Thankfully for you- not as severe as what others will be getting; can't wait to see the aftermath of the destruction tbh.

Being from Houston I'm glad this one didn't come our way. It's been exactly a year since hurricane Harvey flooded the entire city. Be safe people and stock up on water NOW. Places were charging $40 per 24pk of water at one point here.

I saw that on the news about that water... There is a special place in hell for anyone who jacks up the prices during a tragedy like that ?

I'm gonna be hit by the back end of it, but it can't be as bad as being hit by Irene and Sandy directly. I have a lot of family members in North / South Carolina too.

Dude, it's funny and all shit but the climate is a serious issue don't you think?

The thing with saving the planet is that we are on a fucking huge time bomb, and we humans don't have a bright future in terms of the mother Earth, yeah, save the fucking planet or your kids will fucking drown in a massive hurricane like the one's gonna rape east coast.

I'm going to say this once respectfully, after that gloves are off.

America has very little to do with the global destruction of the earth in comparison to the other countries. Not only that but storms like this have 100% hit Earth in the past and would continue to do so even if Humans weren't here. I'm not trying to argue that climate change isn't a thing, it 100% is a thing and has been happening since the beginning of our planet - All we are doing is speeding up the process.

In saying that, The lifespan of our planet will quite easily either kill us all just a little bit faster than it would have anyway. We in 100 years might have ways to not only reverse the speedup we have caused but actually do the opposite and slow it down. It will balance itself out longterm, there's no need to stress. Humans wont always exist on this planet if we don't get wiped out by some massive out of our control issue.

My point is, yes we shouldn't go out of our way to harm the planet, however considering these disasters happened long before we were here says that we are not a factor in why they occur.

Because it's big enough and has shitty laws.

I never claimed I was smarter than anyone.

This is just about facts from logic.

When you argue a topic and post false statements that hurts the community.

If you can't back your argument with fact, then maybe don't make the statement.

So from your link:

Quote:China emits almost twice the amount of greenhouse gases as the US, which it surpassed in 2006 as the world's top contributor to atmospheric carbon dioxide. Today, the country accounts for approximately 23 percent of all global CO2 emissions.

Also that is based on a single specific type of pollution.

Look I understand you want to come up as a smartass now, let it be, ain't into that shit ?

Yeah like I said before, we shouldn't go out of our way to harm the earth, but to say we are causing natural disasters is just not true. For the most part...

Nuclear testing that triggers volcanic eruptions ... ok... I will go with possible, but the big picture nope.

jesuschristisfake - September 12, 2018, 7:23 pm

And to be honest, that's not the only reason why I said it, lets get this clear, I'm not hating on the US, I actually love you guys and your culture lol, but-but-but, I am saying it because you guys are one of the most influential countries in the world, and if the US changes some shit regarding this, a lot of countries will replicate it or at least make people more consciousness about it.
