Easy Method to find Facebook E-Mail ID

Find the facebook username of your target and copy it. You will find this in the address bar, for example /jeff.10 or something like that. If they don't have one and it says profile=1031457 or something like that then you'll have to just copy their full name instead.

In a new browser or incognito mode go to Forgot Password on Facebook and paste in the username of your target.

What will typically pop up options in which to send a forgot password request, either to an email or phone. You'll see their email but it will be starred out. For example j@g*.com Copy this into Notepad

The stars represent the exact # of characters in their email so this can often be easy to find out. Copy the starred out email onto one line and below it type out some variations that match the character length.

j@g*.com --->> jeff.10@gmail.com or something

These will be the same length in notepad

It will also show the last 2 digits of their phone on the forgot password page. Copy them down in notepad too.

Now to see if the email is correct, go back to the Facebook homepage and click forgot password again. This time paste in the email you think it is.

If it's correct you should be taken to the same page to send a recover email, but don't worry the email won't be sent out directly and you'll still see the last 2 digits of their phone # so you can confirm it's correct.

Hope that helps ?

Anykind of feedback will be appreciated.

Spoiler (Click to View) After the massacre at my previous tut, I'll like to clarify that this method at the least won't damage your system in anyway whatsoever ?

Pretty sure not, unless Facebook are that careless with information then I'm pretty sure they'd start out a preset count of characters with respect to the email; but you're basically just saying, in order to get the email you need to know the email already unless you're hilariously lucky and end up with somebody whose email is their Facebook username.
