Hi,

What made you want to do that? How much time / money did you invest into it? How far from completing your Degree are you?

Mostly because I don't feel like studying is for me
I studied for 1 year and it costed me about 30k

I studied for 1 year and it costed me about 30kIf you need time to figure out what you want to do, you could always start at a community college. It's like 1/4 of the price and you'll still earn credits that you need. I know a lot of people who have done this.

If you don't want to consider other schooling, do you have any other ideas? Or are you kind of lost atm? If so I feel you man, we've all been there!

Zeus - September 19, 2018, 6:54 pm

Fuck it, it'll be worth it find a decent job and work up now.

TheHoloMan - September 19, 2018, 6:55 pm

Nah listen there's always chance for opportunity to go back. Take a break bud <3

It's always good to have your "bullshit on the wall" just in case, but you can make an amazing life for yourself without it. Take time and figure out what will make you happy!

420Cartel - September 19, 2018, 7:33 pm

If you're not feeling it then you made the right decision. You can always go back if you feel like furthering your education. Having a break might even send you down a different field and if not well there's plenty of good jobs you don't need a degree for.

V3N0M - September 20, 2018, 2:34 am

I like how people have illusions about university and degrees. University is still important. You learn you get a piece of paper that opens you doors. Chances are you wont work for Muskie sooo...Its okay to drop out for a while, but me myself as a drop out, I feel like it is important to get that degree at some point.

Don't move to a location where 30k is not enough. At this point you're just waisting money.

Vazum - September 20, 2018, 3:05 am

Why you would like to leave the University? There many factors that would make person to leave it.
In my country the university is terrible hard, like there many things you need to pass but they are not important in your life or next future job.
I left university and i started with courses and i learn alot more than the University.

newvibe - September 20, 2018, 3:14 am dude my advice is don't just drop out unless you failed already. always request a gap year or apply for extensions where you won't have to do uni often but you'll get away without doing it but still passing.

videos like these are the pinnacle example to why we have people thinking they can overachieve but fail. Men like Elon Musk who made it don't give a fuck about your degree because they are already up there and them saying it doesn't mean that you should follow them. They're putting you in a rabbithole.

Dotexe - September 20, 2018, 3:18 am

That sucks bro, manage your principles first, because everyone works every single day, you choosed the easiest way. Better work hard now, and then let the money comes with ease, than doing nothing at the beginning, and working all day long at the age of 20 because you dropped out school.

IAmDaniel - September 20, 2018, 5:05 am

I made that decision mostly because it's pointless for me to study

I would study so I can find a job and I don't even want to find one. I work for myself and I want it to stay like that till I die

I will say just do what you want to do OP, but remember not to wander in the wrong way and get addicted/in depression or something.

Try to start up your own startup or business. Have a definite plan about what you want to do with your life.

And if you need some help regarding business or life ,you can PM me anytime. Though HF is a great place to share your problems

CyberError - September 20, 2018, 6:28 am

What do you do ? Sell ebook or ewhore some pedo ?

TayterJ - September 20, 2018, 10:23 am

You're not alone. I did this as well. Went to Southern Polytechnic and dropped out after 3 semesters. Never formally submitted class drops, so the bridge is burned. I recommend finding a certification program for the vocation you are pursuing. For example, if you want to go into IT and computers, go pay for an MCSE certification. I think it only takes a couple of months, and looks way better on a resume than some arbitrary degree with no experience.

I am working with 150 active customers daily, it's kind of exhausting but money keeps me awake

Business management.

That's why I think it was pointless for me to study. Why should I study it when I already have established business which I run very well :D
