Thread: Visiting HF threads gives me a Malwarebytes notification of riskware

Isidar - September 20, 2018, 2:23 pm

every time I visit a HF thread, I get a notification from malwarebytes saying it's riskware, with the domain "#". Doesn't block anything but always get a notification, kind of annoying. Any suggestions?

Edit: Not all threads, only some.

Hmm someone could have a framer in their sig or your settings are high and it's flagging it by keyword.

Want me to run a Malware Checkup on your machine and see if I can find anything?

My machine is definitely clean, only get a site blocked notification and it's only when i visit certain threads, then i get a notification else it's fine elsewhere.

While it would suck if it was.... it would certainly raise hell!

yeah, it's only on some threads, not all.

Have you changed anything recently? When did this start happening ?

I only bought the premium version on Monday, haven't visited HF much since. Did today and got notifications from malwarebytes on some threads.

Going on premium sellers sticky thread (first page only), I got the notification on 2:

It's that guys signature in the first thread at least.

Was just about to post this, it's that guys signature, it's hosted on that cubeupload site, whatever that is.

Edit: on the second thread, Meow has an image on his thread that's also hosted on that site

luke - September 20, 2018, 2:53 pm

Image host. Probably a sig/thread design.

Forgot to add this to my last post but I used to get these all the time and ended up just turning web protection off so it's not just you.

I mean doesn't that defeat the purpose of running AV?

This is the exact same solution hackers hope lazy home users choose to do ?

C'mon man, you should know better around here especially.

I mean it was just malware bytes web protection that's it, which a lot of people don't even run since it's not included with malware bytes free version lol. I have other protections running besides malware bytes and I'm not completely dumb when it comes to visiting websites so I'm not too worried.

It's because some users have hosted images on that website. When you visit a thread with those image websites it reacts to it.

Report to MalwareBytes the false positive with cubeupload.com domain.

Hydra - September 20, 2018, 6:08 pm

I've been getting those blocks for a while now. Ended up adding that domain to the exclusion list. We should probably end up reporting it to Malwarebytes as a false positive.

Vyxn - September 20, 2018, 7:14 pm

Cubeupload was flag by malwarebytes. I still use it tho cause it doesn't compress images unlike imgur.

Vince - September 20, 2018, 10:34 pm

It's this persons signature

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5878120&pid=57521436#pid57521436>

malwarebytes has been flagging cubehosting for awhile now.

But that would be the reason right now.

Sir-Teabag - September 21, 2018, 2:55 am

Looking on the page you posted, I view page-source and find that image host. It appears the user Night (<https://hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=3598999>) uses it to host the gif in their signature spradebassen - September 21, 2018, 3:05 am ive gotten this too somehow

SUI-3183372 - September 24, 2018, 3:06 pm

cubeupload have been fighting with Malwarebytes for a long time now trying to get this block removed. Months ago, using a vulnerability in cubeupload, malicious individuals were able to upload malware to cubeupload and distribute malicious files. This has since been fixed, but malwarebyte still claims that cubeupload is serving malware. Not sure when they'll finally get it straightened out, but it seems like 10-20% of the pages that I visit on HF now trigger a warning from MWB.

Omniscient - September 24, 2018, 4:14 pm

I have to censor/filter their image domain. Sorry but that's just going to have to be how it goes.
