Thread: PayPal instant withdrawal to credit/debit card

QU35T - September 24, 2018, 6:13 am

Well I'd like to withdraw my money from PayPal instantly which they offer to credit/debit card. I've got my debit card linked to the account and confirmed but no option is showing such as to withdraw to my debit card. How do I know if the card is eligible to withdraw? Thanks for any help ?

Most small banks do not support instant withdrawal, big banks like Wells Fargo, HSBC, and other usually do. You could call your bank.

Well, I live in Czech Republic and there are big banks such as Erste Group which is the largest bank for European people. I have credit card issued in this bank and still not working.

There is no way to know. PayPal reps don't even know. They only know what the public knows.

So, the only way to tell is to add it. It's not option?
Then it won't work. Maybe in the future.

Yeah..... that's PayPal.

Yeah..... that's PayPal.

I have card confirmed already on PayPal but can't withdraw to it.

It will better for you to Transfer from Paypal to another Paypal User....That will be instant and fcking easy for you.

I assume if you've contacted customer care and they still don't have it accessible to your card then that's about all you can do. Personally, it's an instant option for me.

It's weird... I did it 1 time on my main acc, then it never showed up again. Made a new acc, added the same card, shows up every time

Many cards don't support withdrawals/deposits/whatever you wanna call it to it.

BITCHLESS - September 24, 2018, 11:04 am

You can withdraw to bank account

Bear - September 24, 2018, 11:05 am

The protocol they use for instant withdrawals arent always supported by every bank or even countries. For example, regular bank cards in canada arent supported.

Try calling your bank.

Ludicolo - September 24, 2018, 12:38 pm

Pretty sure instant withdrawal is only supported in the United States.
