These are basic questions a Google search can answer.

Or you could Google and READ the titles of YouTube results. Dick.

You aren't even smart enough to understand your own damn response.

I dunno why but for some reason this popped into my head (People are/were trying to help you)

Now for using putty which isn't hard like seriously:

VPS, you will need to purchase a VPS from a provider

<https://www.google.com/search?q=VPS+hosting>

Google/Linode/Amazon are pretty reliable if you plan on using it for your "perl scripts" (I remember that thread) then good luck you will need something else. And yes you need to choose where you do your hosting it's your money it's your VPS, in fact most providers are hands off the customer manages the server (This was the policy where I worked and if you wanted a tech to do things that's cool get ready to pay a good price for that, so yes you need to learn this stuff)

Edit: Just so you are aware you will need to at least generate ssh key of course if you are allowing root via ssh get ready for a bad day.

A good VPS for PuTTY? What? PuTTY is what you use to connect to the VPS?

I give up.

PuTTY is what you use to SSH into your VPS.

They just told you that and you ask what they use.....

You are hopeless.

DigitalOcean and [censored] offer great VPS that work perfectly with Putty.

Links? Like what providers? Or just a VPS you can putz around on.. you're insane. You are only interested in a quick solution no respect nor understanding for what you wield.. it's like a kid who found their dad's gun same program. You need to really take a break from the "hacking" scene and rethink your life what you want to achieve and need to learn.

I'd highly recommend buying a VPS from Hostinger. I've always had 100% uptime with them and they're fairly cheap
