Thread: Platinum Cheats shutting down permanently

Treebeard_ - October 5, 2018, 3:24 pm

Quote:It's time we say goodbye to Platinum Cheats.

No sales will be accepted after September 17, 2018 (last order date).

Platinum Cheats will shutting down on October 15, 2018 after every subscription has expired (EOL). Founded in 2015, Platinum Cheats has established itself as the premiere cheat provider on the market in over 3 years of operation. We have continued to push the entire industry forward with our constant innovation and groundbreaking achievements. However, all good things must eventually come to and end, and that is what we've decided to do with Platinum Cheats.

We have grown a lot as a product, a company, and most importantly as individuals. We've poured tens of thousands worth of work, blood, sweat, and tears into our products and have learned so much. But now it's time for us to move on. This decision is bittersweet - we are all sad to see something that we build up with our own bare hands over the course of three years be shut down, but we are all optimistic and looking forward to new opportunities on our horizon.

A special thank you to the Customer Service team @boomdead123 @megadominator2012 @ThatOneGingie who have put in an incredible amount of work keeping Platinum afloat.

Thank you all for sticking with us and being such an amazing community. You gave us the motivation to keep going this long and we surely couldn't have done it without you.

Thoughts?

This is old, they said they were closing down a long time ago.

Also their cheat is pretty garbo so it's to be expected.

CheatsHunter - October 5, 2018, 4:37 pm platinum used to be good, but on last years they wasn't able to stay undetected for 1 wave.

Recently it wasn't able to be good as it used to be in the past.

Those retarded kids couldn't write a single line of code. They hired a friend of mine to write the entire framework, the radar, everything. And in the end one of them insulted him as well. Wish I could find all of you nerds and beat the light out of your eyes. But I promised my therapist I wouldn't kill again.

yes, security wasn't so good, even when it was slot based, but the cheat its self was good.
Better than satan 5 for sure, even if it isn't bad either ? ?

Another one bites the dust.

As I always say, stick to serious cheat providers, not people who do this is a summer/high school project.

3 years = high school project.

What is a serious cheat provider?

If this is true, that's pretty surprising because Invoke always seemed like a pretty good coder from the outside. Knowledgeable posts on various forums, as well as the hilarious debunking of Vuno's shitposting claims.

Platinum was one of my favorite cheats when it first came out. Their 2fov pSilent was OP back in the day. It's a shame.

Pretty sure he's talking about dude719's work on Platinum. Unless he's talking about anything before 719 then idk.

None. Everything is for business. Money, money, money. Providers don't care about you, even if you pay they'll have top-tier SHITE support(which i can't blame but a fancy mention)

There are no outstanding hacks for a reasonable price. Aimware maybe, however it could be better. Satan5 is a nice multihack with a bad aimbot/rcs. Fanta, multihack, recently detected. Everything else doesn't really offer much to put it above and beyond.

Btw platinum was the 2pac of p2cs. Very loved, but not as great as made out to be (plz no backlash, i don't want white people that don't even listen to hiphop on my jock)

You cant say that for all providers just because you think so.

And when recently was satan5 detected?

he didn't say that satan5 was detected. there was a dot before he said "Fanta, multihack, recently detected" which was only pointed against Fanta not satan5 ^^

Platinum was garbage anyway, the only unique thing about it was that you could share the radar with your friends, support was the worst thing about it too.

X22, ArtificialAiming, Systemcheats, Iniuria.

ArtificialAiming existed since around 2007 ..

Those providers are longterm businesses and aren't led by some weird American highschool/College freshman.

I still make use of serious physical businesses free of charge from time to time, doesn't make them less serious now does it?

All of the ones you have mentioned suck, with the exception of iniuria which isnt that old and would fall under your classification of high school project.

Iniuria exists for at least 7 years, if not more. So not really new (oldest Forum post is from 2011)

They suck nowadays, yet they are still huge providers which are more trustworthy than "platinumcheats" who want a copy of your drivers license which are stored on some random unknown server, but I know that Americans aren't particularly concerned about their data anyway.

iniuria is one of the oldest providers

The cheat industry is dying due to new legal precedents being set each year. Game developers abusing copyright law and going after cheat providers because they're incapable of developing a decent anti-cheat. Operating a legitimate business out of the US in the cheating industry is like playing Russian roulette. CS:GO is the only game worth writing cheats for that has devs that won't sue you into oblivion, but that could change at any moment.

Running a p2c is extremely stressful and no amount of money changes that fact. If anything it amplifies it. It sucks leaving behind the community we built, but at the end of the day we need to take care of ourselves.

I've been in the cheat scene for over 5 years now, the last 3 years and 9 months at Platinum have been a huge part of my life. I grew a lot as a person and grew my bank account. All in all a net positive experience.

I'm ready to move onto something else.

Edit: Platinum did initially start as a high-school project, obviously it turned into something a lot bigger than we expected it to.
