Thread: Roytoy - 9 years on HF - Goodbye & I love you

Roytoy_temp - October 15, 2018, 1:37 pm

I woke up today, opened HF to see that I was randomly randomly logged out. Though I still have access to my registration email and password, I had lost gauth due to changing my phone and forgot to disable it while I was logged in.

My name is Roytoy and this is my goodbye. To my second home, to my family, I love you.
hackforums.net/member.php?action=profile&uid=130086

I didn't want to make this thread because I knew I'd get emotional, or maybe because a part of me isn't ready to say goodbye yet. After all, I'm being forced to leave. I've been here since late 2009. I was 16 back then, and I'm 25 now. So many things changed in my life but HF was always a constant. I've met so many amazing people who I now consider brothers, and had so many great experiences which made me the person I am today.

I made my first online dollar here, then my first $20. I bought an upgrade, twice... and upgraded others. Then I bought my first camera, then my first PC.
It was all done through the knowledge I had gained through reading, replying, questioning and even helping.

I came here to learn how to "hack," fearing that I would get hacked myself, and I did learn how to do that, but decided it was immoral. I had feared that I wouldn't be safe here, I feared being manipulated, being made fun of. I didn't know anything back then, but I was surprised. I found a welcoming community. I found friends. I found those who were willing to help without asking for anything in return.

Jesse,

I've always had nothing but the utmost respect for you, constantly supporting your decisions, as strict as they may be. Your commitment to standing by the rules that you have set is admirable, and though me being forced out of HF, my second home had me depressed for the past week, I know I would be a hypocrite if I asked for the rules to be bent for me. I only wish my emotions weren't so invested into this.

I love you all, and wish you the best of luck...

Of course there will always be teenagers on HF. But that doesn't mean that adults wont have a good time here. I've always enjoyed HF (since I joined in 2010) and I am sure some of the younger members can appreciate the knowledge and perhaps guidance from older members.

I think the age of members doesn't matter, it means we all come from different backgrounds with different knowledge and experiences, HF is a great place for all of us to share our own knowledge with other members.

I actually gain a hell lot more knowledge from this forum than many other places. Oh yes, I am also aged more than the general few here and also have a real life lol. HF just represents whats outside afk, a lot more vividly in comparison to a lot of the other boards.

To OP, I remember you from the old days. You should see if you can stick around some how. Its always nice to have people on HF who would go the extra mile just for HF.

Lonely - October 15, 2018, 3:49 pm

Sad to see another old head leaving. 2011 - 2013 were my best years on HF. My brain was like a sponge soaking up all the knowledge. I honestly credit HF with a lot. I'm now 2 years into getting my B.S. in cybersecurity at SEMO and no doubt in my mind HF was what peaked my interest and got me where I am now.

muzzy. - October 15, 2018, 6:33 pm

That's an awful shame and I wish you the best of success in the future.

It's disappointing that account recovery became such a complex process, but ultimately I feel there were certain tasks that filled almost all of Omni's time, and the steps he's taken to change that come with some side effects that can have results like this. I think it's part of the give / take that we ultimately should agree to so that the site can finally start really getting better as it is now.

Once again good luck, and I hope that maybe you can find a way for this not to be the end for you.

Seriously? Come on now. Members don't always talk about the groups they've been in. I've been on HF nearly 9 years myself and I don't even remember all the groups I've been a leader of in the past, let alone each individual group I was in. And "Jesse" = Omni. Possibly quite rude of OP to use his first name as opposed to the name he presents himself on this website (Omniscient) unless they know each other personally.

And OP did mention that thread indirectly. That is literally the point of this thread. OP realized he lost access to his account, realized that account recovery is no longer an option, and then made this thread.

You don't always have to be skeptical. It's not like an admin will see this thread and freely hand over an aged account to some random member claiming to be someone. I believe that this is the profile linked in OP who made this thread.

Possibly quite rude of OP to use his first name as opposed to the name he presents himself on this website (Omniscient) unless they know each other personally.

And OP did mention that thread indirectly. That is literally the point of this thread. OP realized he lost access to his account, realized that account recovery is no longer an option, and then made this thread.

You don't always have to be skeptical. It's not like an admin will see this thread and freely hand over an aged account to some random member claiming to be someone. I believe that this is the profile linked in OP who made this thread.

You ruined it

I was solving a case here I wanted to listen to OP ???

Any reason why account recovery was stopped

I didn't talk about any groups at all, and Jesse is the site owner. I have access to my registration email and everything, and if an exception were to be made, I would only be able to access my account through that. As you can see I've replied to people I've known here and I've also talked to people from my official Skype account regarding this thread. Also what Xerotic said.

through my registration email, and even then I know for a fact my IP and everything has to match. It would benefit no one if I was impersonated through a temp account.. kinda surprised someone assumed that, yet again it doesn't hurt to be skeptical I guess. Thanks for being logical, buddy. Appreciate it.

Are you sure? I swear it's completely fine to create a new account if you lost access, multi-accounting just comes in when you have access to both but you're trying to be someone else, maybe I need to ask a staff member, but I'm pretty sure opening a new account and saying it is you openly when people ask is completely fine if you lost access to your account.

I also understanding losing your account progress, maybe I don't understand how that would be but thought I'd just say that anyway.

There has to be a way to get your account back. Hopefully Omni sees this thread and remembers who you are and all the contributions you have made to HF.

If not, I'm gonna miss you dude. I've known you for a LONG time... probably the longest I've known anyone on HF. Stay in touch

This was crap. If you guys want to see how to do a proper reflection look at how vince did it.

Edit: Maybe look out for my thread my 10 year is coming up in a month. Granted most of the new faces probably don't know me but back in the good old days I was a pretty heavy poster. I am not a kid anymore but this is still a fun place to get lost in.

UM? Nice way to fuck up a good thread. ?

However your research is flawed plus not to mention the inaccuracy of your accusations.

Best advise? Stop being the HF police/mini mod.

On a more positive note:

@Roytoy.

Never knew and or talked to you personally in the past.

Though i remember reading many of your post/threads.

God speed my friend. ?

Buddy how about you continue with this account until omni changes his mind and decides to recover old accounts again ?

SIM-3205632 - October 17, 2018, 12:39 pm

I know i might get some shit for this but i in my opinion i think that Omni should change the rules a bit.

This guy obviously invested alot of time into this forums and even contributed to it by upgrading some other members. It would be sad to see him lose his account over such a stupid little reason. I know that Omni has alot of work so i also understand if this isnt possible for him but maybe give a close friend the access to help people (who contributed and actually helped alot of members on the forums) get their accounts back.

IF you really can't get your account back then i'm sorry friend hopefully you'll do good. <3
