Thread: Recommend Me Car Phone Holders

Money- - October 11, 2018, 2:27 am

Hey? I was looking for car phone holders to place it on my car. Need Google Map to learn new places etc.

So yeah need something to place it in the middle so I can see the map.

I prefer these type of holders that can be placed on the car's air vent or you can recommend others that can be placed on the windshield.

Price : I prefer it under $5 or more depends. Just recommend me even cheaper or better ones. Since I'm not from US , I could look it up at my country's local shopping sites.

Here's one I found that looks good and cost around $3 in my country's currency.

Personally, I use a cheap one from AliExpress lol.
Just search there and order the one you like.

I think I changed my mind. Recently I see some good phone holders stucked at the bottom of the windshield which is not that distractive.

Recommend me some! But not that big which will take a lot of space on the windshield which will cause distraction!

I personally like the magnet ones but they have downsides.

Pros:

Easy to use
Easy to attach to a phone
Generally cheap

Cons:

Large phones will not work with it.
If you go over large bumps in the road your phone may fall.
You have to put a magnet and if you have a clear case it will look bad

Well the magnets really give me the warning though especially as you said over large bumps its going hit my face. Nah man haha magnets are a weird way to hold and stick. Still Thanks for your recommendation.

I dont thing the bump will throw your phone all the way to you face but one thing I forgot to say is that I am not sure if it is bad for you to have the AC or heat on

You Should Buy One That Sticks To The Front Window. I Have One Of Those And They Are Dirt Cheap. Don't Have A Source Or Anything Since It's A Chinese Product That Some Dutch Stores Sell Here.

All caps because of your title :P

Found It.

It depends where you live, if you live somewhere and it's really warm all the time, something that sticks to your dash or window could melt! Or if you live somewhere cold and stick it in the vent and have it blowing hot, it could damage your phone over time. I'd say to stay away from magnet's, had a friend who broke his screen because his phone fell off while driving. I use one that goes in the vent's, even though where I live it's really cold, luckily my car has a dial to open and close the vent I use so it's perfect, some car's may not have this.

Cannot find the one I use, but I would recommend something that holds your phone rather than depend on a magnet.

Put it in the glove box! I ride and don't need phone users running my ass off the road....

Still needing this. Its been months and I haven't really found one lol. I really need it to navigate new routes etc.

Feel free to recommend some. Thanks!

(not allowed to put links yet as I'm new but its called "iOttie Easy One Touch 4 Dash & Windshield Car Mount Phone Holder" quick search should bring it up)

This is the one I use, the adjust ability from the arm and the fact that you can stick it just about anywhere is great. I'm not the biggest fan of vent clip mounts, but if you have a smaller car they might be a good choice. I used it in my accord and fit nicely. I now have a GTI which is considerably smaller and its a little distracting in it.

Hope this helped.

Thanks! I might take a good look on it. I checked the price locally. I might probably consider it.

Is this the best one you encounter so far? Or is there anything else you left in the background but do consider it at one time?

Out of the phone holders that I've encountered it is my favorite. However, you might want to look into a magnetic phone holder if you don't mind putting a magnet on the back of your phone. I personally don't like having any extra pockets or magnets on my phone case, but if your looking for a discrete phone holder a magnetic one might do the trick.
