Thread: Is there an authentic Nike bomber like this or am i being fooled?

Elmo. - October 16, 2018, 1:29 pm

Someone told me it's 200 original price, trades it for 2g weed because "it's too big for him". I highly doubt this is authentic or if there is even a model like that in existence. Anyone knows?

Personally haven't seen one like that, it's either extremely new or extremely old if it's legit.

Also that looks like a windbreaker not a bomber.

Got a year or man id in the tag? Pretty sure that thing if it's legit is ancient af early 90s-2000s perhaps.

If at all. Fucker traded his grandpas windbreaker for 2gs, but more than likely the lad thrift-ed it.

I'd still like to know more about this jacket, anyone knows something?

Demon Lord - November 4, 2018, 1:38 pm

Looks strange, probably old. How much 2gs sell for where you are? Cus I think you got bamboozled Nobody legit checks Nike honestly. It looks decent, I like the varsity look.

Well I doubt it's fugazi, because vintage Nike gear doesn't go for much anyways.

But that's definitely an early 90s Nike Basketball logo, and knowing that, through a bit of googling I found a sweater from the same line on eBay for $15.

No clue.

You'll have trouble finding any information on any late 80s early 90s Nike gear, as it was all produced on a massive scale with that being one of the brands high points.

But if this wouldn't be a bootleg shouldn't this be worth something as there are 0 found on the internet so that makes it "rare" i guess...?

You could get a few bucks out of it, it's not a bad windbreaker and it looks to be in good condition.

But vintage Nike doesn't really go for much, and it's really just up to whatever someone would pay for it. I doubt you'd find a buyer for $50, let alone $200. It's probably more in the range of $30 or so. Really the only 90s era Nike clothing that can fetch some change are the aesthetic, color block windbreakers.

If you really want to get rid of it, I'd put it up on Grailed/eBay. Again though, not going to get much for it. Definitely not $200 unless someone really has a fondness for it.

What year does the tag say it usually says a manufacturer date that can help provide further details.

It's not going to have a manufacture date.

Looking at that eBay listing I found with the same design, they posted an image of the tag which includes the RN and CA registration numbers (the textile registration numbers for Canada and the US respectively). Searching the RN database provided me with no information other than the corporation registering the number (Nike) and their company boiler plate information.

Searching the CA database however, returned an actual date of the registration.

The number was issued on 1997-09-25, so it's late 90s, not early like I originally thought.

And I assure you, that's all the information you're going to find on it.

You can definitely get $200 for it if you add a couple of spices on it, like, say someone famous wore it or something lol

Pyro - November 4, 2018, 3:27 pm

looks like something that Chicago Bulls fan would have wear
