Is there any olugin or any other way to change the number of posts etc completley? Like if a user have 10 posts then if i can change that number to like 300.

I doubt it, you can just do that through the AdminCP yourself. No legitimate forum would want to fake post counts which a majority are.

You doubt it but you say i can do it thru admincp myself? Dont undertand if i can do what im asking or not.

Its not legit fir now but will be when people drop in and think its a popular forum. When they make money on the forum with my help more people will join.

My bad I was thinking of something else, it can't be done through the AdminCP. Something like this without a plugin just means you'd have to go into your database and change the post count value yourself most likely. I can't actually remember if it actually stored a value like that.

But yeah exactly like you said, it isn't legit to alter post counts, plus it isn't hard to tell that peoples posts are altered when they also see the sections haven't got much content either. Altering post counts doesn't eventually make it 'not legit', this is another conversation though that I won't do in this thread. Simply from what I've seen no there isn't such a plugin to do that.

You can simply alter this in databases I guess. but it is not ethical to do so like the above user has specified.

Elitas - October 24, 2018, 11:44 am

Uhh you could alter it, but if you ever re-count again it'll 360-noscope the shit outta you.

What's the point to that anyway? If you don't have a large community it's pretty obvious that you're posts are fake and nonexistent. Even in a larger community people can see that you really didn't make that many posts just by looking for your posts.. A lot of themes now allow users to look at what posts you made. -_- It's not even worth the time to design a plugin for this or even go into your database and change everything. Unethical.
