Thread: Do you have a favorite word/phrase of the month?

natkitker - October 29, 2018, 11:07 am

Every month or so I have a new "favorite word". For example last month it was something like "Awesomeania!!". This month I have been saying "what the flip!!"

Do you have a new favorite word or phrase that you use every month?

Walt Disney™ - October 29, 2018, 11:18 am

I usually come up with a quote to live by every month. When I hear or think of something I'll write it down in my notes.

This month for me was "Disrupt the daily schedule". Tough to do with my job, but I made it happen.

My favorite word this month is "Awesomo" because I saw an episode of south park about it

No, I don't have any ... I'm never changing the way I speak lol.

I love the vocabulary of the English language.
What I don't like is the exaggeration of it's use.

Americans (generalising) use the word 'awesome' a lot that generally has a meaning of "that's pretty good". What is the true meaning of the word awesome?
Standing on the edge of the Grand Canyon. That is awesome.
That iconic picture of the Earth, taken from the moon. That is awesome.
In America, Awesome Hot Dogs are on sale in cans.

Also, the fashionable phrase is for something to be 'super something'
You're not excited, you're 'super excited'
You're not drunk, you're 'super drunk'
Super is, again, reserved for something that is exactly that. Super. Way above even excellent.
Superman. He is not an excellent man, a la Stephen Hawking or Einstein. He is absolutely the greatest being that ever graced the earth. That's why he is 'super'

So let me say I am super excited by this awesome thread
