Thread: Award Market

Xerotic - November 9, 2018, 12:22 pm

Yesterday we released a new feature that allows you to change your award order. Today we are giving you even more control over your profile by introducing the Award Market. The Award Market is a platform that allows members to sell their awards to other members automatically for Bytes.

There are a couple of important pages that you should be aware of:
<https://hackforums.net/awardmarket.php> This is the main page where you can view all the awards that are currently available for sale.

<https://hackforums.net/awardmarket.php?action=manage> Here you are able to manage your awards that are able to be sold in the award market.

Not every award on HF is able to be sold in the Award Market. Existing (currently obtainable) donation awards are excluded from the award market. Retired existing awards, however, are able to be put up for sale. Beyond these, there are a couple of other awards that are exempt. Here is a list of awards unable to be sold in the award market:

Diamond

Sapphire of Ub3r

Sticky Man

Xerotic Bot DNA

Emerald Donator

Litecoinage

DarkDash

Ethereist

Gift

Ace of Spades

BTCash

Rich Bitch

Legalize It

Benefactor

Bitcoinage

Master Donator

Grand Amethyst

Diamond of r00t

Dicey

Businessman

Royalty

Testified

24k

HF News Contributor

Every member is allowed to BUY awards on the award market but you must either be a r00t or Ub3r member to SELL you award.

If you would like to sell your award to a specific member you will see an optional field where you can supply their username. By doing this you are reserving the award sale for that specific member and no other user will be able to fill the order.

When the award is transferred the award reason is changed to: "SELLER_USERNAME bestows the AWARD_NAME award upon you on DATE_HERE."

The original award grant date must be at least 6 months old before it can be put on the signature market. After 6 months the award can be freely transferred with no time limitation.

Award sale minimum Byte amount is 1,000 Bytes and the maximum is 500,000 Bytes.

There is a 20% Byte commission applied to every sale that goes back to HF.

You can find the Award Market linked in the MarketCP navbar category "Markets" listed as "Award Market".

Go give the new feature a try and please post any comments/feedback/suggestions you may have. Thank you.

This is awesome news! I'm interested to see who's going to sell an award first.

aggh465ddd - November 9, 2018, 12:28 pm

Yeah this looks really cool, might have to pick something up.

DOG - November 9, 2018, 12:28 pm

Great ! Even if I won't sell any of my awards :p.

Tweaky is on drugs or something I think lol. 600,000 bytes for one award x)

b?xxy - November 9, 2018, 12:28 pm

This is such a great idea.

I really hope people start selling their awards so I can buy them.

Why not give L33t's the option to sell their awards?

SIM-403479 - November 9, 2018, 12:29 pm

Very interesting.

I doubt anyone has enough bytes to buy atm.

Time to save I guess!

Not many l33ts have awards do they?

Meow - November 9, 2018, 12:30 pm

Finally I can cop that Cat Lover award. This is awesome.

Crypt - November 9, 2018, 12:31 pm

Really happy this was added, I think it's going to bring good things and a lot more meaning to bytes.

I would assume not, I thought about that but I'm sure some do.

Meh.

DOG - November 9, 2018, 12:32 pm

I need dog lover award. Still don't understand why I never got it.

But why the prices are so high? I mean 600,000 omg.

SIM-403479 - November 9, 2018, 12:32 pm

I have a few questions Xerotic..

If I sell my 24k award - Can I get it again when I hit 24k posts again.

If I sell my clovers - Can I obtain them again if I'm lucky?

What happens to the description if I buy/sell an award?

Eagle 95 - November 9, 2018, 12:33 pm

Awesome as always, Xero.

B?ker - November 9, 2018, 12:34 pm

Any reason you can't sell all buyable awards? I can see this as a good way for people to exchange Bytes.

I see it hurting Omni's donations so I think it's a good idea that they can't be sold.

(all the non buyable ones)

Michael - November 9, 2018, 12:37 pm

That's a very nice update.
But the award prices, damn so high.

Pyro - November 9, 2018, 12:37 pm

Currently you want to focus on at least 50% of a GA award cost. If a GA is $1,000 - That would make your dog worth at LEAST $500 to the right person.

At bytes current cost even $0.01 per That's 50,000 bytes. Bytes can be sold for $0.02 per and I do see them increasing in value over time too.

Skippy, yes but ultimately most people who have spare cash are going to buy those awards, broke people who scrap buy won't and instead will post more. So it's a triple win for Omni, Activity boost + Bytes being used + still making that bread. Ya feel me youngin?

Skippy is a really funny character on Youtube so don't take it as an insult. Sure, he is mentally retarded but we won't focus on that.

Quote from Omni

Quote:The new Awards Market allows you to set a Private Buyers UID. So in essence you can do an auction in the Marketplace and then do the private sale through the Awards Market. So you can auction your awards if you want. I just don't see the need to create an Auction scripted plugin. Auctions are overly complex to script out and imho it's not worth it.

I did that intentionally. Every order is logged so in the future I could create some interesting tools like the history of a specific award and the time it was sold along with the price. Imagine that a few years from now, viewing all the members a specific granted award has been on. This preserves the original date as potential value to the award.

That's like saying why do people wanna design signatures that just represent things about them - or why do people get tattoos with things they like? It's a representation.

Someone who likes cats over dogs wont buy the dog award - someone who is whitehat and not blackhat might not buy that award - Someone who hates sushi wont buy that one so forth.

Sorry, the original date adds value to the award and it preserves when it was originally granted. When the award is transferred the new date IS put into the award description for you to see and I will also create a page so that you can see award order history and the history of a specific granted award. So the data when the award is moved is logged so no point in removing the original date for historical purposes.

Aw shit, I didn't think of that. I'm discussing this concept with Xerotic. I might make a separate thread about this. It's a very interesting idea.

Quote:One question though. Can you buy an award you already have?

Yes, you're going to be able to collect awards in a new way.

Quote:If you sell your clover, will you be able to re-earn it?

Yes. Because the award can be earned without scripts unlike Dicey.

Quote:I see it hurting Omni's donations so I think it's a good idea that they can't be sold.

I can disable or alter this if needed. I hope people donate to support HF and they are rewarded with the award icons but I do truly hope they don't only donate just for the award. I hope donations are because they want to support the site so it continues to run.

We are also adjusting the plugin now so that only awards older than 180 days can be placed in the market. This helps prevent members who I newly grant awards from just turning around and selling them which might make me salty.

Also adding a 1000 Byte minimum sale so the commission can't be eliminated by selling for 1 Byte. Max price can't be over 500k Bytes too.

Can you change that 180 days to maybe 60 days? 180 might be a little too much, I can't really sell any of my awards for bytes as I only really bought them within this year.

Or, just non-purchasable ones would work, if the problem is people insta-selling grantable awards.

I agree with 180 being too long! 30-60 seems appropriate, gives it enough time to wait to sell, not too long as well.

Sell award for bytes -> sell bytes
If you want to trade awards:

User A and User B make contract outlining the award trade.
User A puts award up for minimum price of 1k Bytes and reserves the sale for User B.
User B puts award up for minimum price of 1k Bytes and reserves the sale for User A.

That is what is great about this system. You can keep your awards and any sentimental value attached and members who want to decorate their profile can. Plus if you personally want to judge someone based on their awards then you can easily tell if the award was transferred or not. It's a win-win situation.

May take a while but earn bytes, sell bytes, buy R00T (or do direct bytes to R00T deal).

IMHO the member of the month award & the MRT Graduate award should not be able to be listed for sale.

CTRL+F5 when viewing it. You have a cached image. Before we converted to sprite the filename was the wings filename, now it is the diamond's filename.

My bad. I misread it. You can buy awards.

Awards can cost from $15-$1000+, or your byte equivalent.

MOTM was just a popularity contest. It wasn't about who was the best member, but who had the most "friends".

You could buy popularity then and you can buy the popularity pixels now.

@Omniscient - is there any way we could add an award trading option, without the byte fee? It's not common that awards are traded for other awards and it would be rather silly to have a fee while trading the same product.
