Thread: Micro-contract Addition to Contracts System

Ram - November 12, 2018, 7:40 am

Hey there,

I just got an idea of a great addition to already existing contract system to stop spamming contracts with the same person.

I'm dealing alot with this guy and I have to start a new contract for every transaction which are sometimes unexpected cuz we deal as soon as he gets money.

So I'm proposing a idea of micro-contract which can be added as extension of previous contract of a user where you would just click "Add micro-contract". Then inside existing contract you could add another monetary transaction/exchange of same type and it would be under the same contract but just as micro-contract(I'll call it like that). So instead of setting up new contract there would be a new button you would just add for example myoffer = "addition of 650 bytes" and payment = "6$" click add and boom mini-contract inside of a old contract is added tied to the same bitcoin adress and everything.

This would solve spamming of new contracts and b-rating cuz if you have contract with one person you can just add another micro-transaction inside if you are dealing with the same goods for examples bytes. If you sell alot to other people, or same people as I do this is in-handly cuz some people want me to send money after many deals cuz they dont wanna spam contract system with new deals and I dont feel safe/and I dont wanna break hf rules because of this. So I think this would be a great addition.

Let me know what you think, I think it should be easily done since everything else is working great so far!

Can I get any feedback on what you guys think? Post here.

I had some thought but really I don't see this being used as a majority stand point, and I think it's fine that B-ratings go up from 'spamming' I mean, we can always see the type of sales they are doing generating that Byte rep.

Good but maybe not worth Omni's time.

I think how it is now is suitable.

Yeah I see now. I think my idea is maybe as a future "upgrade" to existing contract system. I always like to think stuff can be improved or added ;)
