I have been looking all over the marketplace for a stable Twitch Bot and I can honestly say I have found the one, The pricing is very reasonable and worth the price for the quality of the bot itself.

Comes with great support there is a Live chat feature on the website so if you do have any problems there is the option for quick easy support, The bot itself is very stable and I really like the feature of the chatbot and follower bot its great at making your stream look legit, It's quick at connection and quick at disconnecting when you need it to.

The website has a very clean gui and it's so easy to start using, I highly recommend this product to anyone looking to boost their stream and look legit, I will definitely be recommending this to my fellow streaming buddies, hope this helps many thanks.

I received the 100 viewer vouch copy from op. Really quick and professional response.

Website Overview

Modern design website with great stability. Never seen it go down or act slow before.

Your dashboard is clean and efficient for managing your packages and account details.

Support

The live support is extremely good, I have never seen them go offline (and I've tested it). However sometimes their response is: "I'll send ticket to admin." but still their admin is pretty fast.

View Bot / Panel

When managing your plans all the important info can be located at the top such as channels/plan capability/autostarts. There are 3 separate panels for Viewbot, chatbot and follow-bot and each with their own settings. Their viewbot is one of the most stable out there that I've experienced. (I think it stayed at 112 viewers with no drop for over 15 mins lol). The chatbot is pretty good although they only supply 2 chat lists and the chat accounts are all made on same day sometimes. Other than that they don't allow you to use custom OAuth accounts and for the Follow-bot, you can't really set it up so that its automatic, you'd have to start it per stream unless u want slow ass followers.

Overall rating: A-, Would recommend for anyone looking for beginner friendly software with great support.

You mean this thing? `track9.mixtape(dot)moe/rfrncz.txt`

Originally posted here:
`removeddit(dot)com/r/Twitch/comments/96jy2m/viewerlabscom_users_leaked/`

They just stole what was posted there and obfuscated the "passwords".

Our passwords are not stored in plain text. We use a Framework which comes with password hashing from the get-go, using up-to-date methods of password hashing and salting.

What you're seeing is someone that got fired trying to get back at us. They used order ID's that they'd collected from support chats and then posted about them. Then, he used that Reddit post to make it look like we've been "hacked".

For a start, a lot of the passwords in that list don't even meet our "minimum character length" for passwords.

That original list of "hacked users" has 60,000+ usernames and password and was posted after our site was running for 1 month. I wish we got 60,000 users in 1 month.

I replied before your edit for the "just one of the leaks". But yeah, confirms my point.

dogzzzon - November 15, 2018, 1:23 pm

I used Viewrlabs from 6 months they are the best best quality

ViewerLabs - November 15, 2018, 1:30 pm

Oh, also, from the original "removedreddit" post, I just wanna point out he lists the table names:

Tables: `_users`, `_client`, `_robots`, `_tokens`, `_verified`

Firstly, what the fuck would "`_verified`" be, considering we don't actually ask for email verification or any verification and secondly, if your database tables start with an underscore you deserve to have your shit leaked.

And why didn't they log all of the usernames, email isn't even required to sign up.

Fun fact, 30% of our users have used an email when signing up. The rest are usernames.

So, this "leak", posted a month after we went live, means we have 200,000 users in 1 month.

Fucking PogChamp.

The bad;

Basically 99% of the chatbot accounts are created on the same day, very clear call out
Can only choose between Fortnite and Default chat list messages which are pretty bad & limited
Can't modify or upload your own chat messages catered for your channel to make it look more real
Can't add your own accounts to chat list & chatters, like active subs, aged accounts with bit badges etc

The good;good pricing with the coupon code

Stable and adaptive viewbot (viewers fluctuate so looks more realistic)

Followbot can be drip fed with custom delays and followers have avatars

Viewbot also sends good amount of channel views, looks more organic on twitch channel stat pages to sum up, good value if you don't need the chat bot, but if you do, a lot needs to be improved for it to look more realistic & have more customization

Thank you for the feedback its much appreciated.

We're currently working on adding more chatlists, overtime our chat accounts will age, so that will come with time really.
Along with this, the ability to send your own messages and phrases by from any bot of your choosing is being implemented!

I noticed that you've added an option to add your own messages, this is a big step in the right direction.

You mentioned that over time your chat accounts will age, the age of the accounts is not necessarily the issue.. the issue is all of them being created on exactly same day which is fairly unrealistic, should add real aged accounts with random creation dates or let people add their own aged&subbed oauth accounts instead of using yours, not only would that take the resources and load off your shoulders, you can literally require people to share the accounts between other customers if they wish to add their own.. literally everyone wins.

I understand that the average person that uses your service doesn't give a shit about that though, but to each their own. glws

Hey, thanks for the feedback!

We are actually working on this and it's coming very soon. We have been ageing thousands of new accounts to be released in to the system, and we will remove all of the ones that are currently there - we had to rework our account creator to make the accounts look a little more "legit".

Also, with this, we are adding in the ability to provide your own accounts. The reason we're taking so long for this is because it needs to be user friendly, and adding features that let you use your own accounts/our accounts/mix of both can become quite confusing to the user.

We have a lot of new features coming soon too, some that you won't find on any other viewbotting site, so we look forward to begin beta testing them!

I appreciate your input :)

We changed how many channel views are delivered with the viewbot because it was delivering thousands of channel views for a small number of live viewers. We refined it so it wasn't delivering thousands of page views per 50 live viewers, which is extremely unnatural.

Viewerlabs package review. I received the 100 viewer vouch copy from op. Really quick and professional response.

Support The live support is extremely good, I have never seen them go offline (and I've tested it). However sometimes their response it: "I'll send ticket to admin." but still their admin is pretty fast.

Thanks for the review! As I've mentioned, the chatbot is something we're working on and we're very, very close to releasing. We've been ageing some new accounts and we've been working on some new features, so we'll hand out some more copies very soon!

As for the support comment, we have staff with varying levels of access. So if that support member cannot handle a certain task, it's passed on to someone who can, and we have a few people that can, so typically, the "admin" will handle it really quickly.

Everything looks super nice, the price seems a little high for the amount of viewers you get. The other view bot here view runs has better prices, but there lowest package starts at $50 to where your lowest is $35. If you could match view runs prices and have lower min packages like $25 this would for sure be a win. The fact you can have 2 channels and I saw an auto start feature, if the price was the same, that alone would beat it. The site also seems a little more HQ and stable to.

The reason why we're a little more expensive than views.run (and it's only a little bit when you consider the tax they add) is for a few reasons...

- 1) We include a follow bot with our plans
- 2) We include a chatbot with our plans
- 3) Our dashboard is way more advanced
- 4) We roll out updates all the time
- 5) We know who provide their proxies and we know that's why they can go so cheap + why their viewers are so unstable.

Plus, we always have a coupon available which brings the prices even closer together.

500 viewers for a month on views.run is $216 (inc VAT)

500 viewers for a month on Viewerlabs is $232 (using the 25% off we currently have) and you get followers and a chat bot.

I'm not 100% sure what you mean by tax with PayPal for 100 views it's $50, with you guys a 100 views is $90 so it's almost double? The coupon does help, but again that's only for the first monthly sadly. The extras you guys give like followers and stuff is nice, but again a lot of smm panels sell them as well pretty cheap. I do agree your dashboard looks a lot better and does seem more advanced. I know view runs is coming out with an actual panel with a chat bot and stuff, so no idea how that will turn out on their end. If only the price was a little closer together on the views themselves. I feel like most people are looking for around 40-70 viewers. Once you get in that range you basically have $50 for 50 viewers from you, or $50 for a 100 viewers from them.

Yeah, but when you go to the payment page on views run, they add 20% tax. We do not.

So it's $60 vs $67.50 ($90 - 25% coupon).

Edit: Nevermind, I've just been informed they're only adding tax to countries outside of America. That's why I was seeing it and you wasn't.

Whoops. I take it back!

We have a different code every month, it's usually never lower than 25%. We haven't had a month where the coupon isn't there, basically.

Edit: also, the coupon code isn't locked to your first order or anything. You can buy as many plans as you like with the coupon.

I asked for a vouch copy, but never heard back. I ended up talking my friend into buying a week so I could check out how stable it is compared to view runs. He had it for a few hours and went fine, the bot ended up fucking up though. He contacted support and I guess there was a problem with stuff on your end, but got fixed soon. I guess I'll keep checking up on this thread and see how it goes over time before I consider the switch. I wouldn't mind paying extra for less views if everything was more stable and gained extra features. So I guess we will just see how it goes.

Anima - December 29, 2018, 12:51 am

I've been using ViewerLabs for a week now and it's worked amazingly. The viewers have been pretty consistent, the followers they provide are also really high quality.

The panel is easy to use and layed out very well so honestly I would highly recommend this service.

You can start and stop your stream as much as you want & it will not effect your plan (Unless it is a single use package, but im sure they just send views for the whole 12 hours)

I'd say these guys are 100% the best view bot out there right now. Thanks very much for the vouch copy also :)

Otherwise, you can just start the bot with say 10 viewers and then update them. You do not need to stop the bot to update the viewer count.

Or, in like...4 days...you'll be able to specify the rate at which viewers join :)

Legit how is the stability? botcamp advertises as the most stable but it currently has twitch banning its proxies the moment the bot is activated and the fluctuations and dropoff are too large. If I set it to 50 will it give 50 with + or - 1 to 3 viewers? I expect minor fluctuation but i've used views.run before and they would jump up and down like sometimes 1-40 viewers.

Yeah, Botcamp is having issues because the method they use isn't effective long term. It offers great stability and a lot of control, but it's simply too easy for Twitch to ban the IP's. I've heard stories that they stopped selling to people when they get too close to using up their available pool of proxies.

We of course have fluctuation, but nowhere near like what views.run experience. We have worked very hard to keep the fluctuation as low as possible. I think aside from places like Botcamp, we're by far the most stable. But Botcamp has been struggling for a while (IIRC).

Also, drip-feeding of viewers will be released today.

I'm interested in this for the long term, but how "interactive" or "realistic" is the chatbot?

Would I still have to pay a third party to manage a chatbot for me? (Thirdparty will send messages with the bot under several usernames to make chat feel more realistic than a regular chatbot)

You can upload your own chatlist, or you can have them not talk at all but still be able to send manual messages as the bots in your channel. You have the ability to "fetch users" which will fetch all of the bots in the channel, then you can just select the username you want to write a message as and send a message. We have a few people that have friends/whoever writing messages as the bots manually.

The bot stops after 12 hours because it can become unstable. However, you can put auto-start on, the bot will stop after 12 hours and start again automatically almost straight away, this would be the work-around. So yes, we can provide non-stop in that sense :)

Yes, you can buy as many plans as you like with that code. You can also buy plans and do not need to use them, they won't expire unless they've been used at least once. There is no ETA on when the coupon will disappear, it's done randomly :)

Also another huge thing, even though they obviously have accounts for followers and chatting, if you don't have active chatters they don't show up in the viewer list which would obviously look like you're blatantly viewbotting if you have 100+ viewers but the viewer list only has like 10 people in it. The viewer list thing is a huge disappointment IMO. I probably won't be purchasing this service again.

We have a viewerlist...it's the chatbot. There's an option under "speed" for "No chat, just viewerlist".

I will add a note on the site that specifies it does not work on reruns, although this is the first issue we've had with this.

The other option is "I want my bots to talk". You can add as many or as little as you like to the viewerlist and they will not talk.

Doesnt twitch know if your viewers are real or not?

Just an update on this - the bot will work on re-runs in the next few days. We've been working on some other features as well, which is why we've had the delay.

The bot will not need a relaunch if you go from live-streaming to re-run, but, there will be a slight delay. If you were to restart it, they would go to the re-run a lot quicker.

mansonegro - August 5, 2019, 6:04 am

I stopped acquiring the product, because they did not accept my created chatbot list and much less have one in Spanish. In addition, it is impossible to be writing each message in each linked bot account. Finally, if you add the followers only mode it would be great.

Someone warn in this thread, when you have those properties.

DuckBoi - December 15, 2019, 11:59 pm

Going to give you guys a honest review of Viewerlabs because I've been frustrated with them for awhile, and am now looking for a proxy based solution. Been a long time user, many months. The stability of the bot used to be okay. Now it's random. One day absolutely 0 bots get sent to me. The next I have +20 over what I'm supposed to have. I have to remind support to send the bots. When they do the bots jump up and down sometimes 10-15 at a time. These are fluctuating every 45 seconds so you can imagine how un natural that looks. That's alright if you are a huge broadcaster or botting high #'s but to make it look legit it's a sham.

The bot isn't very stable in it's current form.

As soon as I find a better alternative I am switching
