??? The big problem with this whole BTC situation is that it creates a monumental gap disconnected from the reality of 98% of people. Your more reasonable prices date back to November 2018, when BTC was worth $4,600. But the issue is that most subscription service providers using BTC have forgotten that the price of BTC has drastically changed, making it inaccessible for 98% of people! It would be more realistic to set the equivalent price in dollars from November 2018, which was $4,600, meaning 0.01 BTC would be $45/month instead of $600/month with BTC at $60,000.

I notice it mentions alt signals, is this heavily focus on alt coins or top ranking ones too?
