Well today I tried to login to my main and it got banned permanently.

My account status says:

Account banned for macroing in OldSchool. Our macro detection system has been monitoring your account closely and has detected that you are using illegal 3rd party software which violates the rules of the game and breaches your terms of service with Jagex. Our team have reviewed the evidence and can confirm that you were using illegal botting software. Jagex are able to accurately detect all illegal 3rd party software and any promises from their makers about being 'totally undetectable' or 'no ban guaranteed' are inaccurate. As such your account has been permanently removed from game. Please take this time to familiarise yourself with the rules should you wish to create another account.

The only thing I did is using random auto clicker to do some alchs for like 1-2 hours 2 weeks ago, nothing special. I wasn't even member anymore and haven't played on the account on the 5th of december which is the offense date. I can safely say I haven't done anything illegal for like a week, only thing I did were some afk alchs. That shouldn't be worth a major ban right?

I wanne know if the offense date = the date I broke the rules, because I have not logged in on that specific date.

I also wanna know if using a random mouse clicker that is not used for a long time should give you a perm ban.

If anyone could enlighten me it would be great ?

Smexy - December 6, 2018, 5:40 am

Macroing and botting are really punishable.

You've used a bot, otherwise you would have gained a 2 day ban for using AHK macro's.

Autoclicking alch is a way of making profit and thus leads to goldfarming, you could understand that.

I know it's punishable and I knew the risk before doing it, I'm not mad. It's just this point that has me very confused:

"You've used a bot", I NEVER used a bot or botclient to train my stats, just a random mouse clicker for alching. Is this also considered as botting/goldfarming/major macro?

Don't get me wrong, i fully understand my ban if that is the case. However, I've a feeling that I've been hacked and used as bot or something. I haven't been online on that day neither have I EVER used a botclient or script.

Yes I've received a 2-day macro ban for making wines with a mouse recorder.

They told me if I was doing the same thing but instead making profit, like cooking sharks I would have been banned permanently aswel.

You could stock a lot of rune items while you can alch them for profit.

This is considered a more severe case because you make profit instead of losing profit.

If you remove gold from the game you get punished as someone who likes to train his skills without doing anything.

For all else I might just have been lucky, but I've botted before as a goldfarmer and I got majored instandy after reaching 97 fishing.

I also wasn't using the mouse script before I got banned, I remember closing the clicking client and going to bed and then to school.

When I got home the ban was issued at 11:30 AM while I didn't use it for the last 13 hours at that time.

Auto-clicking can do it for you. That is one of the most easiest ways to receive a ban. Sadly permanent bans are very often reversed. You can email Jagex but I would not get your hopes up.

Vuln - December 6, 2018, 6:27 am

Bans are often delayed purposely to make it harder to determine the exact cause.

What "random" auto clicker did you use?

<http://www.advanced-mouse-auto-clicker.com/random-auto-clicker.html>

and

<https://www.murgee.com/random-mouse-clicker/>

So there is a chance I got instantly perm banned with a major macro just for autoclicking my alchs for not a long time? Again I'm not mad, just trying to learn from mistakes and clear things up.

Thx for the information guys, I'll mail jagex anyway.

Nothing new here, there's always been a chance with autoclickers. Super easy to detect.

I was aware of that, but not about the fact that they find it a "major macro".

Also guys I'm wondering something: I read that your other accs also could get banned for macroing, all my other accs are working fine. Will they be banned in the future as well? Also autoclicked on those.

I think you're fine if you're not caught soon. I got a few accounts permd for botting years ago, while most of them still remain.

Cool thanks for the heads up. I was thinking that I shouldn't play anymore because of the delayed bans I might be banned in a week or so and all the effort is for nothing.

Nothing fun about clicking the same exact pixel for 70 hours to get your desired lvl.

There's other legal alternatives like splashing, stringing jewelry, burst/barrage, stun alching, etc.

Im just saying playing rs requires you to do boring repetitive shit that's the reason people use tools like autoclicker.

Yeah but it's legitimately a big part of the game. I think as we grow older we just can't do that anymore, however it's still the game we know and loved as a child. As a kid I was willing to Alch for 8 hours a day for 94 mage. Now, I question what I'm doing with my life after a few laps of agility ?

J0nSn0w - December 6, 2018, 11:42 am

This is why i dont bot. sorry you got banned.

Cara Delevingne - December 7, 2018, 2:58 am

Sorry for your ban, but everyone is right. Autoclickers are super easy to detect. Jagex cracks down on bots/auto clickers very harshly. You will probably never recover the account due to Jagex being harsh on them. But, it affects the economy and ultimately can change the game depending on what the player is doing.

I did 1tick Karambwan for 99 cooking. Took me less than 2 days to achieve. If you do not like the methods of clicking so much try other methods such as splashing. You click once every twenty minutes to cancel being logged out.

u?op ?pisdn - December 7, 2018, 3:19 am

I still have two very important questions:

1. Is the offense date the date that the offense happened or the day I got banned
2. Should i continue on my other accounts or will they be banned in 1-2weeks

Day you was banned, you should be fine. But if you use other bots / autoclickers they will eventually IP ban your acocunts.

I know, I just dont want to nolife and grind 2 weeks and then get banned. So I'm considering making a new account or play on my alts that used the autoclicker 5th of december. I'm just asking for advice on this decision.

They might get banned if jagex decides that you're committing the same offenses over and over again. Personally I think you should be fine if you were just autoclicking on a few of your accounts. I think ip bans are usually reserved for people that own bot farms, ddos, account hijackers, bug abusers.

Ah okay cool, I honestly thought perm bans in general were for people like that and minor macro bans were for autoclickers and shit.

Does anyone know the maximum time it takes to get banned after a certain action? 2weeks?

Pretty sure I caught a minor macro ban from when I accidentally used a 1:2 ahk script for a half an hour or so on my main from 3 years ago lmfao. It's all way too relative i think for a clear answer. Jagex has been known for having a fucked up banning system that will catch up with you when you least expect it if you've broken rules in the past.

Not totally related but I nearly shit my pants this summer when I recovered my first ever account. I had been trying to remember the password/email for at least 7 years, and I finally thought of a defining detail and Jagex let me recover. Stats are complete dogshit, but man the nostalgia.

Hmm.. I've auto-clicked my main and pure to 99 magic with wasting a shit ton of GP on natures. I've never been banned and actually auto clicked for 10+ hours straight. I've even went to sleep and woke up with massive gains but never a ban. Surely when I would randomly Log I got that bad feeling in my stomach but never banned. The auto clicker I use is GarysHood auto-clicker (also comes with an auto-typer.) It hasn't got me banned at all. I don't use AHK or any 3rd party botting software as those obviously get you permed quick asf. Usually, I put my auto-click on 1 second and let my mouse hover over the high alch icon.. I'm almost always inside of my house by the portal in case some kid wants to report you for not replying so I'm never at the GE or well-known places. Just be discreet with it and I would recommend only using the auto-clicker I provided. I'm sure there are better ones out there than this one but I have yet to receive a ban..., Just be super careful next time. Their bot detection software doesn't pick up the clicks as botting indications, Only mouse movement and a couple of other things I'm not too sure of. hope this helps! gratz on the unban. I would've been heated asf if my main got banned. I only used auto for magic and fletching (10 milliseconds) But that's it. Goodluck !

Ger? - December 12, 2018, 1:26 am

If you're going to autoclick at least use ahk or something that lets you click at random intervals. I have yet to be banned doing that. I have been banned however using garyshood at like a 1 second interval. This was 7 or so years ago, but yeah, random interval clickers are the way to go.

You can send in an appeal here

<https://support.runescape.com/hc/en-gb/articles/115002238729-Account-Bans> . As long as you using a proxy or something when you get banned and you still have your original IP (don't even really need original IP, just better to have) you can get them quashed. I've been running zulrah bots for a few months and have been able to quash a lot of my accounts from perm ban. I've been able to quash some of my accounts 3-4 times. Was banned in october while botting zulrah got it quashed, just got it banned at the end of november and just got it quashed again lol.
