Thread: Photopea, a Free-to-Use Browser Photoshop

I haven't used this a lot so can't give an in-depth review of how much you can actually do with this but from what I've seen in the few times I've used it is an almost exact replica of Photoshop CC. It's handy for people in the same boat as me that hasn't got a licence and doesn't use it enough to obtain it by other means.

Enjoy!

Never heard of the site before. Seems pretty interesting though. I wonder if Adobe is aware of its existence :p

I'm going to use it a bit and I'll leave a review as well here.

Yeah, used it a few more times now and it seems to hold up.

Looks awesome! Thanks for sharing.

Since switching entirely to linux, I miss Affinity Photo and Designer... (better than photoshop in my opinion).

Gimp just still isn't there... and Affinity are jerks about linux. ...so having this as an alternative is just great!

Glad I helped, man and yeah, not being able to use some software is what puts me off Linux.

I'm going to have a play about with this. I've previously used Pixlr Editor but found that to lack some features.

Nice! Never heard of this before, thank you for sharing this, I can't use Photoshop too

First I've seen this, but it's cool as hell. I've considered dipping into photoshop but the large installation and software itself is ew on my pc.
