Nobody want to own a Cryptocurrency? ?

Effexion - December 22, 2018, 5:33 am

I would snap this up if I had the funds. It would be an interesting project and comes with all the things needed - and already sort of established.

GLWS

$80 bid here. I own RFUD token, I know they're not hard to make so my money is basically on the website itself.

Willful - December 23, 2018, 11:43 pm

What was Drill Cash's goal that got people interested?

This week for ONLY $100 ?

XMR - January 7, 2019, 6:57 pm

Wasn't this that one coin you were promoting in the crypto section? I'll guess that it's next to impossible to revive a failed cryptocurrency let alone sell a practically worthless token, but good luck with sales regardless. ?

† S A V A G E † - January 8, 2019, 3:50 am

Now for only $100, just you need a good marketing and you success! ?

† S A V A G E † - January 9, 2019, 3:52 am

Anyone interested in buy? ?

† S A V A G E † - January 10, 2019, 6:08 am

I understand hyping.

But you guaranteed people to become rich if they PURCHASED your advice, that's something completely different, that is scamming.

I'm not promoting that in Crypto mentoring and not is the thread "$50 for be RICH!", it was other thread ?

Saint - January 27, 2019, 3:42 am

I'll buy it for $10 worth of bytes. I mean realistically seen i don't think anyone else would buy this. Simply for the fact that it will be a shit task to revive this. I just want to have my own coin for shits and giggles.

The way you marketed it implied that you weren't involved with it. When you called your coin the "Bitcoin Killer" while having no wallet software and no working demo, you basically screwed yourself over and lost nearly everyone who was interested in the project. As I said in your thread, a coin should have some type of new technology that's useful to the public. It shouldn't rely on being shoved in peoples' faces to gain traction. Making a cryptocurrency isn't all marketing. In fact, it's relatively very little marketing. You can't shove your coin down peoples' throats with no working demo and expect them to be super hyped up about it. You have to show that your coin is viable for people to invest in it.

Either way, this coin isn't worth anywhere near $100. No one's going to buy a failed cryptocurrency (especially for $100) because it's pretty much impossible to revive a failed coin.

Lavish Living - January 27, 2019, 9:22 am

I'll buy it for $10 btc today.

Pm me

† S A V A G E † - January 27, 2019, 2:15 pm

I'm not selling only the Cryptocurrency, I'm selling the Telegram, Twitter, domain & website, that's worth a lot more than $100 ?

† S A V A G E † - January 30, 2019, 5:33 am

Nobody interested to buy? ?

Legion - January 30, 2019, 5:43 am

I came to offer $5 but you've bids for $10. Nobody in their right mind will pay any more for this.

† S A V A G E † - January 30, 2019, 5:53 am

That's not an auction. ?

redskull1992 - January 30, 2019, 6:32 am
