

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Tips for learning Russian ?

Hah - January 12, 2019, 7:56 pm

I'm native in English and I'm having a hard time studying the Russian language. In particular , I can't understand that when in Russian it'll look a certain way and be spelled a certain way but it sounds completely different from what it looks like it sounds.

Human - January 12, 2019, 7:58 pm

Ive been trying to learn russian on my own. you should put some time of your day into duolingo. Its helped alot for me.

Hah - January 12, 2019, 8:37 pm

(Jan 12, 2019 08:58 PM)Dadd Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Ive been trying to learn russian on my own. you should put some time of your day into duolingo. Its helped alot for me.

Oh yeah I've heard of that app.

scam. - January 13, 2019, 1:20 am

You have to bear in mind it's a completely seperate alphabet. English doesn't help with learning it like it would for a language like spanish. Some characters look the same and sound the same and some characters look the same and sound different. Just need to drill into your mind what characters make what sound and try forget the english meanings of the characters.

Like ? looks like H but it doesn't sound like the english H it sounds like the english n. It's easy as an english person to read ??? as Het rather than Nyet.

Russians a pain in the ass of a language because it has multiple ways to depict characters too. Theres typed characters and handwritten characters and some look nothing alike.

CyberError - January 13, 2019, 1:28 am start with books and then move on to google translator to learn how a sentence sound like in russia once to learned all these thing start watching russian movie this'll help you a lot

Angel - January 13, 2019, 1:38 am

Try to play comp on de dust 2, Russians play only de dust 2 (csgo)

flavoral - January 13, 2019, 1:42 am

(Jan 13, 2019 02:38 AM)GuardianAngel Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Try to play comp on de dust 2, Russians play only de dust 2 (csgo)

i would suggest counter strike source. it has more Russians.

Ram - January 13, 2019, 6:53 am

(Jan 13, 2019 02:38 AM)GuardianAngel Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Try to play comp on de dust 2, Russians play only de dust 2 (csgo)

LOL this is the best suggestion no jokes.

Hah - January 13, 2019, 10:29 am

(Jan 13, 2019 02:38 AM)GuardianAngel Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Try to play comp on de dust 2, Russians play only de dust 2 (csgo)

In my head I just +3'd you (:

(Jan 13, 2019 02:20 AM)mywifeleftme63 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You have to bear in mind it's a completely separate alphabet. English doesn't help with learning it like it would for a language like Spanish. Some characters look the same and sound the same and some characters look the same and sound different. Just need to drill into your mind what characters make what sound and try forget the English meanings of the characters.

Like ? looks like H but it doesn't sound like the English H it sounds like the English n. It's easy as an English person to read ??? as Het rather than Nyet.

Russians a pain in the ass of a language because it has multiple ways to depict characters too. There's typed characters and handwritten characters and some look nothing alike.

See I understand that , and ??? is a perfect example of something I do understand. But the fact that "dog" has no "?" in it makes me feel puzzled.

blackcoder00 - January 13, 2019, 10:45 am

(Jan 12, 2019 08:56 PM)l0lz Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I'm native in English and I'm having a hard time studying the Russian language. In particular , I can't understand that when in Russian it'll look a certain way and be spelled a certain way but it sounds completely different from what it looks like it sounds. use duolingo apk and try to make some Russian friends to practice the language it's more easy

Hah - January 13, 2019, 10:46 am

(Jan 13, 2019 11:45 AM)blackcoder00 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) use duolingo apk and try to make some Russian friends to practice the language it's more easy

Thanks for the tips

Crypt - January 13, 2019, 11:12 am

I've also been learning Russian and made a few friends in Russia. It is very different than English, the sounds, grammar etc is a lot different. My best advice is to first learn the alphabet so you can at least pronounce Russian words even if you don't understand them, however, after that, you should start learning vocabulary and really make sure you work on grammar as well. Try to meet some people that are native speakers, there are lots of apps out there for that.

It's a tough language to learn but you can learn any language if you have the motivation and put in the effort.

(Jan 13, 2019 02:20 AM)mywifeleftme63 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You have to bear in mind it's a completely separate alphabet. English doesn't help with learning it like it would for a language like Spanish. Some characters look the same and sound the same and some characters look the same and sound different. Just need to drill into your mind what characters make what sound and try forget the English meanings of the characters.

Like ? looks like H but it doesn't sound like the English H it sounds like the English n. It's easy as an English person to read ??? as Het rather than Nyet.

Russians a pain in the ass of a language because it has multiple ways to depict characters too. There's typed characters and handwritten characters and some look nothing alike.

??!

You need to pretty much throw out English and realize it's a completely different language and it's like you're a newborn baby learning all over again ?

PerfectStorm - January 13, 2019, 11:22 am

Hang around a lot of Russians

Hah - January 13, 2019, 11:23 am

(Jan 13, 2019 12:12 PM)Canny Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I've also been learning Russian and made a few friends in Russia. It is very different than English, the sounds, grammar etc is a lot different. My best advice is to first learn the alphabet so you can at least pronounce Russian words even if you don't understand them, however, after that, you should start learning vocabulary and really make sure you work on grammar as well. Try to meet some people that are native speakers, there are lots of apps out there for that.

It's a tough language to learn but you can learn any language if you have the motivation and put in the effort.

??!

You need to pretty much throw out English and realize it's a completely different language and it's like you're a newborn baby learning all over again ?

Thanks for the tips bro !

(Jan 13, 2019 12:22 PM)PerfectStorm Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hang around a lot of Russians

Yeah , already ordered a tracksuit and some cheap vodka.

Crypt - January 13, 2019, 11:35 am

(Jan 13, 2019 12:23 PM)l0lz Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Thanks for the tips bro !

Yeah , already ordered a tracksuit and some cheap vodka.

No problem, I've been learning for a few months but if you want any tips or anything just shoot me a PM ?

Tony Stark - January 13, 2019, 11:54 am

(Jan 13, 2019 02:38 AM)GuardianAngel Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Try to play comp on de dust 2, Russians play only de dust 2 (csgo)

Nah nah nah, what he wants to try is VRChat, theres rooms full of russians talking. A lot speak English as well and can help you.

Also you don't require VR to play.

Angel - January 14, 2019, 1:57 am

(Jan 13, 2019 12:54 PM)Tony Stark Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Nah nah nah, what he wants to try is VRChat, theres rooms full of russians talking. A lot speak English as well and can help you.

Also you don't require VR to play.

oh right this as well, totally forgot about this

Geass - January 14, 2019, 3:02 am

I don't know what way would be easier to learn russian for you but I learned my english mostly from movies, internet and little bit at school.

Try to watch movies with russian voice and english subtitles, it might help you.