Thread: Anyone in the Nike / Adidas / Air Jordans resell business?

Net - January 20, 2019, 3:08 am

Looking to know more about the whole flipping business and might try it in the future.

Anyone know what is the best place to learn all about it?

The name of the game is flipping. Replace shoes with tomatoes.

Am I wrong?

Yea, of course. Thats the basic. But I want to talk to someone who has actual experience with this, because the Nike reselling business is a place where things can go 180 real quick.

The biggest problem I have right now is, that the country im currently in aren't that interested in Nike's, Adidas or Air Jordans, so I'd rather talk to someone if im thinking of buying / selling out of country.

It works similar as selling supreme, it's really all about hyped items and shit like that.

You probably heard about Benjamin already, but check this out:

I never did it tho, tried to purchase a ton of shit from supreme with a bot online, but the order did not get thru for some reason so they returned my money.

Wondering about this as well. Shoes are a good market. Could you sell them on amazon?

Just need a good bot, proxies, and luck. There's releases that are guaranteed money, just a matter of getting the item.

The game is simply "dead". Although you can still make good money.

Made like $700 per Yeezy in the hype. Never wore or owned one. The profits were to sick

I would just say it depends on if your looking to sell brand new or sell knock offs etc.. I knwo a lot who would go to the goodwills or thrift stores and buy them and sell them for great profits
