You could just use proper .htaccess to fix these issues.

Because you use a seperate host name (but same server) for the files themselves you could just edit your config.

Something like this.

PHP Code

<?php

Just an example, change according to your ports, directories etc

<VirtualHost *:80>

    DocumentRoot "/xampp/htdocs"

    ServerName files[dot]dropmybin[dot]me

<Files .>

    ForceType application/octet-stream

    Header set Content-Disposition attachment

    php_flag engine off # VERY important

</Files>

```
</VirtualHost>

<VirtualHost *:80>

```
    DocumentRoot "/xampp/htdocs"

    ServerName dropmyb[dot]in

```
</VirtualHost>

php extension are not supported so if he upload a .php file he can't get access to php function
We'll add it asap
