Thread: GET FREE FOOD ORDERING FOOD ONLINE

So yesterday I was lazy and ordered some food at Thuisbezorgd.nl (Dutch food delivery service) and ordered some subway food.

I ordered a sandwich and a cookie but I stumbled upon the idea to try something with the "note" which you can add to a product you order.

For example, when you order a sandwich you can say like "No lettuce please".

Anyways, I knew that they would have to print the order at their place because they have to give me the receipt so I added some text which looked kind of legit and might trick them into thinking it was another product being ordered like this;

I added the note "Chocolate Chunk x2 $1.60" to the sandwich I ordered and believe it or not, instead of 1 cookie, I got 3.

I think this has to do with that they might have thought it was a bug or something and they can't really not give you the cookies because if I actually ordered the cookies and they wouldn't deliver they would have to pay me back or deal with a negative review. Another thing could be that they were just really busy and didn't notice it was a note.

Have fun testing this!
