Thread: How do you feel about paying taxes?

Playboy - January 30, 2019, 3:59 pm

In my opinion, yes taxes do go to some good things such as VA disability and schools, roads etc. However, a majority of the taxes we are forced to pay are actually unconstitutional. If you don't pay, they lock you up and spend even more tax payer money.

For those of you with land in the USA here is a helpful tip from me to you.
Are you tired of paying land tax for your own land? All you have to do to stop paying is to file for a land patent. ?

I dislike it like most everyone, I am sure. But I understand why I pay them, and the importance of that money. I can appreciate where the funds go and dislike paying them at the same time though.

What I dont like is for example politicians willfully spending tax money to take private flights to god knows where.

Yes, I am tired of my hard working money getting taxed to buy EBT and Welfare for families who shouldn't have so many kids if they are so poor... Seriously

Pay your taxes or pay the price

Who Soup - January 30, 2019, 5:03 pm

I consider it a cost to do business. The people in charge of allocating the tax money are a bunch of fucktards, just assume that money is as good as gone and won't benefit you in any way.

PerfectStorm - January 30, 2019, 5:42 pm

I don't know I suppose I feel "ok" about it. Its by no means any fun...

Exactly this I couldn't have said it any better thank you

I would feel good paying taxes to a government that uses them for its citizens

I wouldn't feel good paying taxes to a corrupt government ignoring problems

That's it

StargazePrometheus - January 30, 2019, 6:30 pm

Pretty communist is how I feel. Raise 'em higher, pay for more people's healthcare, for social services, and for public education. Heck maybe even get wild and pay to fix some infrastructure or line NASA's pockets a little again.

This works best in combination with a slashed military budget ;)

I couldn't post the link here bc new; but google "top countries military spending" and have yourself a hearty chuckle at how much the US wastes on it's absurdly-powerful-already military. 610 billion to the next runner up, China, at 228 billion. Then Saudi Arabia at 69 billion, and Russia at 66 billion.

We need taxes as much as we hate them. We are overtaxed, me being in one of the most taxed states in the U.S. It sucks horribly but without them we would be screwed way more than we already are.

Tax isn't unconstitutional, obviously. Not sure where you got that idea from.

In any case, I'm fine with taxes for the most part. What I'm not fine with, I will vote against (if able) or will vote someone in who agrees with my viewpoint. If the tax is voted in regardless, it is what it is, I have the freedom to leave the country or move to another state if I am unhappy or it becomes a huge issue, but it's not, at least for me.

Yes, it wasn't until WW2 that a fed income tax was imposed. It was supposed to cover the war expenses and after the war the tax was supposed to be abolished. That never happened. No one really won the war (it's still going on) and they still tax us for it.

Greetings from Australia.

Although our tax money is wasted quite a lot (most governments will), we see some great things come from it. Our public health care system is probably the best perk. I have no problem helping random people get healthcare. They might be unemployed moron drug addicts, but I like to think the large majority are students, unemployed individuals trying to find work, individuals with a disability, the elderly, etc etc.

Great for our roads and schools too. It also allows people to take up loans to go to university (although technically I do not agree with this as it creates FAR too many opportunities and allows universities to offer useless degrees as well as be flooded and create massive competition instead of only allowing the smartest people into the hardest degrees, in saying that I am currently a Psychology student using government loan so...).

I am for taxation as I have seen the great thing it can do. However, there needs to be some serious tweaks to government spending laws here in Australia.

Bossk - January 31, 2019, 5:06 am

Feels like shit to pay them, but I can see the underlying purpose of it so doesn't really bother me too much.

I can't stand people who r filled with hatred once they think of taxes, "tax is theft lol", "low tax - yes please lol". Here's the thing, you are a part of a society and as any membership, you follow the rules within the society. If you can't stand paying taxes, leave society. There's nothing preventing you to live in a forest without any obligations.

Ofc it's no fun but at the same time the government uses some of that money to run everything. Although in my country we have 40% of corruption so... not very happy about it, but what can I do.. also 20% taxes on everything you buy which I find like it's complete bullshit, but whatever.

Bluffer - February 1, 2019, 1:37 am

I don't have high taxes yet so I'm fine paying what I do currently.

CHICKENWING12 - February 1, 2019, 6:36 am paying taxes is the same as living in a country. You have to maintain everything together otherwise it becomes a big mess and yes it is not always pleasant but it must be otherwise we had no roads and safety. (I never said that I'm a fan of the police) So just pay your taxes and you do not get any whining :)

Pow3r - February 1, 2019, 7:55 am

HOMODIN - February 1, 2019, 2:51 pm

I'm happy to pay taxes, my taxes go mostly to schools, medical services (of all kind), library's, some social benefits...and then of course the road works and things like that. There's some thing that I don't pay taxes on because they actual tax declaration of those things result in so much more work and issues in general when it comes to the "normal day-job" income.

Taxes are only justified if the amount of money you are paying is returned back to you in equivalent value of services from the government, anything else I consider stealing. So in general taxes are mostly theft.

You've paid taxes. You said you haven't but evidently you have via sales tax and everything else I mentioned. Anything over $5,000 is tax fraud. More and more BTC companies are being investigated by the IRS/SEC as cryptocurrency is taxable.

I currently work with a branch of the IRS criminal investigation division and it's so fucking easy for them to track large amount cash purchases now a days it's ezwin. IE: You can't walk into a dealership and pay cash in hand without filling out tax paperwork.
