

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Non-Free Account sellers that sell with paypal question

Silver Fang - February 3, 2019, 1:16 am

Yeah, so those who sell non-free accounts with selly and shoppy linked with their paypal how does it actually work? I mean shouldn't there be loads of problems due ToS and what not with paypal.

Chargebacks, closed paypals, is the paypal masked when people selling with selly or shoppy via paypal?

JoshAllen - February 3, 2019, 4:59 pm

Most people don't charge back if you provide a real service, and if they do, just refund them and accept the loss.

Lets say 10 people buy a $5 account, and 1 of those people charges back.

It is a lot better to accept the $5 loss than accepting orders manually.

SORRIE - February 3, 2019, 5:02 pm

(Feb 3, 2019 05:59 PM)Ty TM Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Most people don't charge back if you provide a real service, and if they do, just refund them and accept the loss.

Lets say 10 people buy a $5 account, and 1 of those people charges back.

It is a lot better to accept the $5 loss than accepting orders manually.

Pretty soon all orders on HF Will need to be accepted manually