That depends on your budget buddy, you didn't mention that... Also you didn't mention if you want VPS or Web Hosting Shared.

Alexhost.com
krystal.co.uk
buyshared.net
fastpipe.io
keliweb.com

Give a look to Krystal and Keliweb, if you don't want to pay to much just go alexhost, buyshared and fastpipe.io

Remember to have quality you need to pay, but GoDaddy in my opinio doesn't have quality at all, for me is the worst hosting providers.

It also depends on your knowledge. Scaleway offer instances at dirt cheap, and that leaves you with control of the whole stack (LAMP or LIMP). If you're familiar with Linux CLI, they're cheap and great. If you're not, there's a good amount of shared hosting providers out there.

Let me know if you have any questions bud!

Thank you very much for your recommendation. I appreciate it ? I will check these out. VPS or web hosting shared, it doesn't really matter to me as long as its works what i need which is my simple wordpress site. Yeah i can agree with you on that, its works but its just missing somethings

You should go with DigitalOcean. They have cheap plans and a really nice dashboard, support team, and different products. If you want a credit drop me a PM and I got you a month of free hosting.

2x vCPU

2GB RAM

20GB NVMe SSD Storage

1 x IPv4 Address

1 x IPv6 Address

Total: €2.99 p/m

To host a basic website, Scaleways pricing is dirt cheap. DigitalOcean is very polished, and seem cheap at first, but it soon racks up. I don't have a promo code which gives me money off if I refer you, but I do have a lot of instances with them, and they're really good.

Also bare in mind that both of them are self-managed hosting, so when it comes to support, they will not log in to diagnose the issue. Both companies will provide general advise.

OP, sorry for multiple responses in here, but DO is all polish. They've got some cool tech, but ultimately you're hosting a WordPress site.
