What would you do with 80m? I should be coming into 80m soon. No joke.

webdev77 - February 10, 2019, 7:51 am

Just hiring lawyers instead of asking people on the internet. What is this 80M Runescape that you are getting?

Playboy - February 10, 2019, 7:53 am

I would suggest hiring a lawyer because like it or not there's always one family member that will legally challenge you for it.

You can't go off and buy a house worth $25M if you're worth $80M, you're out of your mind. If you're earning steady income and you're worth $80M your house should be at a max double whatever your average annual income is. Since you're not employed invest the majority of those funds into long term indexes and you should be able to pull 5% annual income. Off that you can buy at most a house for 16M after all expenses and even then that's far more than you need and the majority of the house would be empty. Personally I'd just stick to a nice studio in two states or countries no more than $500k in cars every 3-5 years (keep in mind you'd sell the old ones to buy the new ones so you'd only lose a fraction of that if you buy smart) and possibly buy real estate to rent out. Key here is to earn more money not throw away half of it for no reason and then spend the rest of your life watching your funds dwindling away.

Thanks man. I'll have to think like this when I've got the money. But I really want a £20-£25m house right now. I plan on buying that as my base and travelling the world for a long time.
