If you opened a business, what kind of business would it be?

I'd open up a gaming station where you can pay by the hour to play online or offline. A section for virtual reality headsets, xbox playstation and computers. You could pay a monthly rate and pick from a complete list of games.

What about you?

Mercury - February 10, 2019, 11:10 am

I've been struggling with this for years. I have the means and knowledge for startup but I'm lacking an idea or product. Sucks ass. Been debating learning to code.

Bluffer - February 10, 2019, 11:12 am

Web development agency. Few years off. Will make it happen though.

I think your overthinking it, just find a service that is popular in your area and start your own - I want to start a business but I'm in the same situation, cannot decide on what to start.

There's so many options its retarded

Lynx - February 10, 2019, 11:59 am

Coding services, offer a tech-product etc. Something like that. Would be very pleased if I could make it happen.

Pyramid scheme, stop being such low self esteem

TCP - February 10, 2019, 1:51 pm

Probably just another reseller of common goods or a software house

NuckingFutz™ - February 10, 2019, 2:56 pm

I was kinda like you and was hard stuck trying to decide what to do. I also have a weed problem which limited me enormously. So i got a tent and started growing my own weed to save that expense, and then used that to make a porn site that is generating a decent amount by now. I then saved up and just recently bought a zmorph vx that i will use to create personalized art and sell on Etsy, Amazon etc.

The point is that sometimes it's better to just start making some money and then the rest will usually come by itself.

HERMES - February 10, 2019, 2:58 pm

I love flipping money, so whatever business I can buy something and resell it for a good bit. That's my favorite.

But probably either be a kingpin or run a marketing and management company for businesses with a % of sales/income they make with our help.

SIM-3257834 - February 10, 2019, 3:14 pm

I'd open a business dedicated to selling shit tier ebooks to HF members.

If you actually had the knowledge, you'd have products listed everywhere in this forum. Don't lie bro lol. You don't even need to make anything unique to make money online, you just gotta provide what people don't have and if they do have it, then give it to them at a better price..

I don't necessarily want to make a living online. I make a decent living as is. The problem being I work for someone elses company.

Screening media industry selling to quarries and mines. I already have connections from China so I can import and flip for a huge profit. Only problem is initial startup costs. I'm gonna need at least $200k to startup and stay competitive. I'm looking at a business loan currently, only downside is that the bank want to use my house as insurance for the potential loan.

-Rogue - February 10, 2019, 7:33 pm

I might rent out my cars and start up a car rental business.

Though that is a long shot for me, as it's quite a pain in the ass to manage a business here without getting in rough with local gangs.

A common field so make sure you;

- 1) Try to separate yourself from the competition
- 2) Find a great location, DON'T just pick the first available option because of excitement
- 3) Go all-in on people relations and you will see a lot of customers come back again and again

They never called it pizza back then tho. Italy invented the name Pizza, however America invented it first by eating toppings on flat beard. But I'm not here to argue who invented Pizza, as fuck thank it's around still today and everyone loves it.

Peoples stomachs = money. Any type of takeaway shop that can push out a fuck load of orders in a populated area = money.
