Thread: Take a minute to honor Steve Irwin.

Mr. Robot - February 21, 2019, 4:45 am

Can we all take a minute of silence - shouldn't be hard for most of you lonely fucks - to remember the great Steve Irwin.

The man was a legend, the real life Nigel Thornberry.

Today was the day he was born in 1962.

(edit i'm ahead in the world, it's the 22nd - Australian time mofos)

Krikey. From what I understand his family still follows in his footsteps. What a great guy he was.

Crickey gosh golly whuaat a fockin wopper. ~Steve Irwin

RIP

I feel sorry for kids born post 2005, they will never experience running home to watch Steve rodeo a fucking croc.

Surprisingly I have a copy of his movie on DVD. It's mostly a b-movie, but just like with any Chuck Norris movie, you can't help but love it.

Steve irwin, the outback norris.

Let's not forget about eastwood though, old clinty boy was a fucking legend himself. They each had their stomping grounds.

Yeah kevin harts reactions lmao

Vitani's Mate - February 21, 2019, 7:19 am

Yeah man. I remember watching a lot of Steve Irwin videos and shows when I was little. My brother was a massive fan and was fucking heart broken when he died. =(

#Skyline - February 22, 2019, 10:16 pm

Steve Irwin was a fucking legend. May he rest in peace.

This man was fearless and actually understood animals than anyone in the world.

John F. Kennedy - February 22, 2019, 11:38 pm

This man was awesome. Super friendly guy, loved animals, and I'm glad his kids are following in his footsteps.

lol stfu

thats like saying elon musk's kid is better then him cause he works at tesla

Athr - February 23, 2019, 12:57 am

What a great man.
Died doing what he loved.

No, that's like saying he learned from his father to become better. That would mean his family did the best job they could - teaching their kids everything they know so their kids can be better.

PerfectStorm - February 23, 2019, 6:19 am

Wow I remember this guy its such a shame he died. RIP.

Gandalf - February 23, 2019, 7:15 am

I grew watching this dude on the TV
Time flies :(
