Thread: Youtube video ranking if the video is stolen

GoatAgain - March 1, 2019, 3:57 am

Hi. Can my video on Youtube still get ranked well if the video is stolen? What about if I only use the audio from another video? Thanks for answers.

Just make a fresh video and leave people's hard work alone. It's guys like you that are the scourge of the CPA world.

Thanks for the answer, but don't really wanna spend time and money making my own video to test different smmpanels.

Anyone else?

Money? You don't need money. As for time, I've spent time myself making videos only to have them copied and uploaded by competitors (same descriptions too lol) before and it's pretty shitty. Why ruin the campaign of someone that's worked hard to produce quality content by storming in having done no work and copying it all?

Hell, drop me a PM, I will even make you a video myself tomorrow when I have time.

Thanks, will drop you a PM when I have some more free time. However, do you have any idea if it affects the ranking if the video is stolen? How did it go for your competitors when they copied the video?

RunDMC - March 1, 2019, 9:41 am

Of course it effects it. And if i see someone steal my videos i will use a take down service on them.

People like you and indian people who does this is the reason that IM keeps becoming harder cause yt makes new rules all the time cause of it.

Shef - March 1, 2019, 10:06 am

There's a reason for that, dude.

Copying whole exact video will not work.

Just copy proofs of the niches from others video if you don't want to deal with aftereffects.

OP, contrary to what the others are saying, yes - you can rank a video that you stole - just change the meta data of the file. You can do some extra stuff like cutting 1 second off the video + lowering the volume/adding noise to the audio. I have had no problems ranking such videos to page one. I've done this with all types of affiliate offers, and CPI-related campaigns.

People do this all the time - sometimes when you want to test a niche - this is a good way to take a dip without spending so much time on the proof part.

There are usually some parts that you should edit though if you don't want to lower your conversions. I suggest after taking a dip - and the niche is great - then go ahead and spend time on making a good proof video/purchase one.

do you guys actually make money off doing this? how much do you make? do you have to pay money to get the videos views and for it to work and stuff? do you just steal a popular video or what do you look for or just anyone you see? do you have to spend money to get these making money?

do you have to be smart to invest in videos or do you just pay for views to come in and the link starts getting traffic?
