

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Any1 know info on how to get free TV on Hospedia hospital bedside UK unit

MARZY79 - March 5, 2019, 2:44 pm

I've been stick in hospital now for almost 3 weeks & my shitty phone, has a shitty battery, which can't hold long enough to stream a full movie (plus charging cables so small, even can't watch/ reach me to watch), whilst charging. I was told there was a way to get free TV, instead of paying £25 every 3 days, which I'm now in the few hundreds spent mark, & simply can't afford to keep buying credits & also don't know how long I'm gonna b in for. So I desperately need any way around having to purchase anymore credit. I've BPD & really need a TV 24/7, as can't get to sleep in silence & it's killed me the last 5 hrs without this basic necessity lol....any1 point me in right direction pls ?? Massively help me out if any1 could hook me up & massive respect to any help you guys could give me. I'm a newbie, so thanks !! ???

Listen brand new to this - I'm in hospital seriously I'll. All I wanna know is if it doable or not & pointing in the right direction pls !!! I'm sat in silence & for BPD & PTSD silence is no good...howay good help, even navigating this pgs I hard for me..pm my or email me pls with a yes it is or no it ain't !j!! Howay man friggin he'll I'm suicidal: here !!

V3xD - March 5, 2019, 6:22 pm

use a website that lets you watch shows/movies for free like watch-series.co and buy a god damned extension cord?

ps: noone believes you

Takehito Morokuzu - March 9, 2019, 5:04 pm

IDK how it works, maybe you can request the hospital to purchase a laptop with a long enough power cable, if the hospital provides internet access you can use streaming sites to watch TV (if you are looking for a specific channel I can help you find links for them)

I recommend just a cheap laptop since you are looking to save money. £100 should be good enough.