I don't like the hemp green color too bright, the only thing I like about this is the leaf connecting to oil

If he was then it would be a shit load better.

OP, it looks a little MS Paint.

There's like 100 things going on in it.

Sometimes your favorite things cant all go together.

It looks pretty bad tbh, but if you're learning then it's fine to mess with all the different tools and effects. Like why is there a lens flare on the leaf? Your background takes up too much focus, and your focus is tacky looking. The logo thingy in the middle probably shouldn't look like it's being covered in shadows, but maybe you were going for a 3d effect. It'd also look better If you took out the detailed leaf and put in a silhouette version of it, but at the very least take off the lens flare lol. Which brings me to the next thing to work on which is your lighting. it comes from the left on your big logo and then it comes from the right on your leaf. Keep the lighting universal (for the most part) or else it looks way off.

That's all I can really think of. but as it is, I wouldn't use it if you paid me. 5/100 for the lens flare.

But don't let my hard critique keep you from doing graphics, everyone's stuff looks like this at some point. :)

It's not really a logo mate.

I mean that background just takes the L for me bro, It just is too colourfull. If you just had the logo with a little bit of shading maybe then it would be a lot better standalone.
