Pair Of 14-Year-Olds Eventually Arrested, But Not Before Making Sure That No Tests Or Lessons Requiring Internet Could Be Given

A hacking scandal has rocked a New Jersey school district.

Two tech-savvy teenagers are accused of disabling their high school's Wi-Fi system. Police said they did it to get out of tests, but now they're facing charges.

Police are calling what happened at Secaucus High School illegal, but also ingenious.

something as trivial as netcut would be able to accomplish this or a physical jammer

it's not exactly complicated post auth

""Basically, since so much data and signals to the school's Wi-Fi network that it can't handle all this information and basically shuts down or jams," Ng added."

nevermind...sounds like they paid for a booter lmao

People are so dumb hacking into schools. What they don't get is its a government agency they are hacking into.

government agencies are vulnerable as fuck and it's not quite the same they're not dumb because of who they chose to target, they're dumb because they didn't ensure their opsec

"Two tech-savvy teenagers are accused of disabling their high school's Wi-Fi system" Probably just disconnected the power adapter lol

Mix - April 4, 2019, 10:33 am

None of us, It was probably someone who goes to that school.

I disagree! Not all agency's are vulnerable as fuck.

And its majorly as fuck dumb to attack an government agency.

which agencies might you be talking about? the DoD? literally the last line of defense?

no, it's really not. APTs do it all the time.

America is literally one big HTB for enemies of the state.

Enemies hack US = Prove it.

US hacks Enemies = Inciting war, against public opinion.

SIM-3257834 - April 4, 2019, 7:05 pm

It's okay everyone, even if they used a booter or a $5 board to "jam" the network. They'll be lined up with job offers at Microsoft and Google to turn them from skid hats to white hats.

What the fuck are you talking about. Re-read my post in fucking english.

It says that when Enemies attack the US, people get told to prove it -

What they should do is give them community service to teach idiot teachers how to use a computer.

This still isn't as bad as the time the NSA and DOD were easily accessed by Gary Mckinnon.

People never realize what they're getting into when messing around with public school boards. It's literally the government's property.
