

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Upgrade Payment

F11 - April 5, 2019, 6:23 am

I got confirmation for purchase completed and now an email saying it's no good or something.

The bitcoin wallet I paid with doesn't receive it so what do I do?

They say they don't cover 3rd party issues.

I'm so confused .

ririki - April 7, 2019, 1:57 pm

Coinpayments was today really weird if you talk about this.

I paid for 2 Scratch Cards, it wasn't marked as paid like usual but after few minutes it was sent and it instantly marked it as confirmed but they payment had 0 confirmation.

Bacardi Cola Lime - April 7, 2019, 2:06 pm

Did you make sure you sent enough money? Having in mind the fees you pay for each transaction.

F11 - April 7, 2019, 3:22 pm

(Apr 7, 2019 02:06 PM)mentoles Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Did you make sure you sent enough money? Having in mind the fees you pay for each transaction.

Apparently I was short .02 cents.

Mix - April 7, 2019, 3:35 pm

(Apr 7, 2019 03:22 PM)F11 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Apparently I was short .02 cents.

if the amount is insufficient then the payment process can refund you if you give them your address and the TXID

PerfectStorm - April 7, 2019, 3:35 pm

(Apr 7, 2019 03:22 PM)F11 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Apparently I was short .02 cents.

Ah that is always fun. Refresh that payment page more often?

Coin payments should offer refund in email.

LinK - April 7, 2019, 3:38 pm

How much is a standard fee for BTC transfers normally? I figured wallets would charge the appropriate amounts before you submitted the payment to ensure your payments go smoothly....

iNviZ - April 7, 2019, 3:41 pm

I always send 1.00 extra and then you will receive an email from CoinPayments asking for a return address to send back what was extra.

(Apr 7, 2019 03:38 PM)LinK Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How much is a standard fee for BTC transfers normally? I figured wallets would charge the appropriate amounts before you submitted the payment to ensure your payments go smoothly....

It depends from where you are sending the funds from most of the time.

LinK - April 7, 2019, 3:43 pm

(Apr 7, 2019 03:41 PM)iNviZ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I always send 1.00 extra and then you will receive an email from CoinPayments asking for a return address to send back what was extra.

It depends from where you are sending the funds from most of the time.

Right on, sorry for the stupid question I never really do any crypto coinage payments.

iNviZ - April 7, 2019, 3:47 pm

(Apr 7, 2019 03:43 PM)LinK Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Right on, sorry for the stupid question I never really do any crypto coinage payments.

You are fine man, Crypto is so up and down these days it makes it hard to understand.

F11 - April 7, 2019, 6:55 pm

(Apr 7, 2019 03:38 PM)LinK Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How much is a standard fee for BTC transfers normally? I figured wallets would charge the appropriate amounts before you submitted the payment to ensure your payments go smoothly....

(Apr 7, 2019 03:41 PM)iNviZ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I always send 1.00 extra and then you will receive an email from CoinPayments asking for a return address to send back what was extra.

It depends from where you are sending the funds from most of the time.

(Apr 7, 2019 03:38 PM)LinK Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) How much is a standard fee for BTC transfers normally? I figured wallets would charge the appropriate amounts before you submitted the payment to ensure your payments go smoothly....

(Apr 7, 2019 03:41 PM)iNviZ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I always send 1.00 extra and then you will receive an email from CoinPayments asking for a return address to send back what was extra.

It depends from where you are sending the funds from most of the time.

Yeah I'm assuming the value of bitcoin had just changed slightly in that short timespan. Usually it automatically calculates in the fees.