Thread: BTC \$6800

Omniscient - April 8, 2019, 8:52 pm

I'm calling BTC to be $6800 before June 1st 2019. Currently it's $5220. Even if it dips again below $5k I am firmly placing a price target of $6800 within 60 days. I base this on market sentiment and activity. I think we weathered the worst of the storm early 2019 and we'll start seeing the big gains again. There is very little negative pressure in the market at this time. Positive signs of a healthy market continue to show. We should see a few 5-8% days which won't take many to bring us to my price target.

Enjoy.

I agree with you Omni, I think from June onwards it will grow rapidly, especially as we approach the halving.

Historically there's always been a nice climb between 6-12 months before the halving.

I think the next year is not only going to be good for BTC but for alts as well :)

What's your opinion on mining ETH and when it will become financially viable to mine it again as a small miner? I used to mine it for a while but when it tanked I stopped. Any idea to when it might be worth starting up again?

Bacardi Cola Lime - April 9, 2019, 1:36 am

I agree with you. There are signs of a healthy market so far. Smaller bumps will eventually lead the a bigger one. 6800$ Is a very reasonable price for BTC to reach before summer, looking at the current state of the market.

.Infinity. - April 9, 2019, 11:03 am

Agree with an increase, disagree with your price target. BTC will face large resistance if it gets close to 6k, and I don't see it breaking 6.5k right after. Within 60 days I think we will have gone up, corrected, settled, and maybe start trending up again if market sentiment remains strongly positive.

Perhaps $6250 is realistic in my mind.

Yin Yang - April 9, 2019, 11:10 am

And to be clear I'm not predicting the market will give ETH that valuation again anytime soon. I think it took a huge beating after it was doing well for a long time. It's still great technology. Think that ETH had an all-time high of $1400+. It's now 15% of that while BTC is 25% of its high.

people like jack dorsey are pushing behind it heavily. but other than that, is the crypto space even really doing anything? seems like it's moving back more than moving forward. now that the money isn't the same lots of projects are pulling out or delaying activity. maybe the lighting network is getting better but other than that crypto will always just be speculative investments to me. even if it goes to $50,000 i just wouldn't put any chips on it again until something happens.

Got the same feeling, I believe we will see one more new low. A very similar thing happend in April last year, and going into May it had been a very bloody 4 months and all of a sudden the price rose up by 25%-30% (BTC), some altcoins by 50%. BTC hit $5400 today. And a 25% jump will bring it to my target of $6800.

That "resistance" is just a lot of sell orders for profit taking. If BTC moves up to that range I think a lot of orders might change and we'll see buy orders placed. not worried about a $5800 ceiling personally.

I think it is likely we will hit the $6000 target by May 1st. Saturday is most certainly reasonable, I would be foolish to say it's not possible. I hope it happens, but personally feel it may take a bit longer in to the week to progress that much. Does not matter though, I still do not think I will cash out until $6500. It's thinking like that which will haunt you when BTC hits $50k. Just saying, because many of us sold when be bought BTC at $300-$600 when it hit $1100-$1500 only to cry when BTC hit $19k and even still when it was at a low of the year $3k.

You just never know with BTC where the ceiling is and when is that good low point to buy.

I agree, I am always going to be a constant holder, but I have too much invested now and will need to cash out at least 50% before mid-May.

I wish my financial situation were better this time of the year, given the fact I have been waiting patiently since it was at $3500, then purchased even more at $3900.

Regardless if bitcoin truly did hit 19k, with my minimum investment which I will always stick to holding I would make ~30k (USD) profit which is enough for me to not cry myself to sleep.

BTW I am curious how you make that calls and pull that numbers.

I guess it is not TA but I can't figure out any other ways to make a call with such a specific price target.

Im holding roughly 2,5 BTC, i want to hold it for 2-5 years. Do you think its worth to split 0,5 BTC into altcoins ? I was thinking about ETH and maybe one more alt.

Im full time holder, i can afford losses. I just dont have any technical skills with crypto. im getting btc from online and local business too.

I hope you are not holding on an exchange or some web wallet.

If I had 2.5 BTC, I would keep 0.5 in alts (0.4 in majors and 0.1 in low cap shitcoin) and rest in cold wallet.

Nope. im using blockchain.info. never had any issues with it, but i moved 2BTC to paper wallet some time ago, just to feel save.

Thanks for advice. I asked because i know i will earn more BTC in the next few months. I earned 8k$ since i returned to HF(february 2k19), all made just with selling bots on hf(i can prove that, i used only one BTC address in 60+ contracts).

See the graphs and market, you'll find that BTC is now surging and would continue; however, the price may fluctuate for a while, but it's not going down (below $5k) anytime soon!

Everyone is too anxious about a $7000+ BTC. Don't get your hopes up. If it hits $7k you should sell everything and wait for pull back to buy in again. We won't sustain $7k+ for very long.

I make my predictions based on market sentiment by reading news and paying attention to trends. Sometimes there is clarity in the market and I'll make what appears to be a bold call. Markets can be unpredictable but there are moments that the odds are in your favor.

Yeah I think I saw it recently drop down to 0.3 or something like that ? Would have been a great time to enter for those who didn't enter yet!

I got in a little less then that, not much difference though, so it would have been such an ideal time.

I'm selling everything I have and not holding.

Now, this is likely going to bite me in the ass but I'm happy to take whatever gains I've earned now and put them into my pocket.

At this point it's an unpredictable market with too much enthusiasm and can drop 10-15% at any point. It's not imho a good time to buy, but a better time to sell and wait for a pullback.

As of this post BTC at $6963 so I have correctly called the $6800 and then some.

As for alts, ugh. It's a messy market but I'd stick to ETH, BAT, and Waves.

The worst was 2017 when BTC was $600ish. I remember when it started to shoot up an I sold at the new highs of $1300 only to witness with much despair how it rose to $20k and never taking a moment to chill out to buy in again. Is $7k BTC dirt cheap? Will it begin to spike to $50-100k by the end of the year? Maybe. I think the market is much more mature and savvy now. I don't foresee massive 10-15% daily rises which would make $50k BTC price possible. I figured BTC would be over $10k as a high around this time back in 2017. It peaked too early and now there is a bit of a mess to deal with when it comes to perceptions of another bubble. It's healthier for the market to have skepticism in the product.

Just saying.

Well I ended up cashing out my Bitcoin at ~$7000 after I saw how it lost support (apparently) and dipped well below $7000 over night.

Now it's trying for support in lower $7000 range but I hope it dips and can buy back in soon.

If I didn't cash out after making ~$1000 CAD profit, I'd of gotten complacent and ended up losing it all.

I remember when it started to shoot up and I sold at the new highs of $1300 only to witness with much despair how it rose to $20k and never taking a moment to chill out to buy in again. Is $7k BTC dirt cheap? Will it begin to spike to $50-100k by the end of the year? Maybe. I think the market is much more mature and savvy now. I don't foresee massive 10-15% daily rises which would make $50k BTC price possible. I figured BTC would be over $10k as a high around this time back in 2017. It peaked too early and now there is a bit of a mess to deal with when it comes to perceptions of another bubble. It's healthier for the market to have skepticism in the product.

Just saying.

If u drop another time machine prediction for btc beeing 50-60k im gonna donate 2% of every profit i get ? ? ?

4.2% best I can do you drive a hard bargain.

Imo there's not much profit in crypto to be made at its current state, and I don't think BTC will ever hit the highs it once did. Foreign exchange markets (Forex) is where the money is, so much money flowing through the market on a daily basis. If you have decent capital, the worlds your oyster.

If BTC hits 20k by the end of the month I'll upload a video of me eating a shoe to HF.

No way it hits 20k, 15k at max this month.

as I always been telling

BUY - HODL - NEVERSELL - MAKE BILLIONS

And BTC already struggling with liquidity , because there is not enough btc. Meaning still not every btc been mined and there are more buyers than sellers.
