Madness. As a fellow Australian I hope he is dealt with lightly. He's one of the biggest contributors to freedom of information in recent history. Widely recognised as a hero in Australia.

Elweth - April 11, 2019, 4:30 am

This is a sad day as a fellow Australian :(

Riggs - April 11, 2019, 4:40 am

Anyone that isn't angered by this hasn't been paying attention.

"Contributor to freedom" and "dealt with lightly", don't go together in the same sentence.

n31ght0 - April 11, 2019, 7:04 am sad but why just now? why they not arrest him years back before? something fishy. it's like an agent that already not useful again and they demolish them

Yeah sure, but do you know why he's currently being arrested? You don't bite the hand that feeds you. He played himself by trying to gather info with his side company INApapers (parent company is WikiLeaks) on President Moreno and his family. Assange is no longer a hero, he's a fucking idiot.

realsunjester - April 11, 2019, 7:10 am they're just pissed off that he published documents and started a movement to expose big government. assange is a hero.

Int Ptr - April 11, 2019, 7:34 am

Brilliant news. Hoping for hard justice.

Man I feel bad for him. See how guys like him and Edward Snowden are painted as traitors and criminals when they have have exposed the zionists and government, ofcourse they are going to want to oppress them!

Bill Gates - April 11, 2019, 7:47 am

Wonder how long he stays in the UK before they ship him off to the US for 8 life sentences.

Juicy - April 11, 2019, 7:58 am

This is fucking bullshit. As far as I am concerned, he's a hero and did an amazing job exposing corruption in governments worldwide.

Oh well, as an American ill forever be grateful for what he did in 2016

Pawnhub - April 11, 2019, 8:40 am

It's almost time to start pressing the bullets and head out the door.

CosaNostra - April 11, 2019, 12:21 pm

Fucking hell, rip freedom...

n3rox - April 11, 2019, 12:24 pm

no freedom at all, end is coming...

Dude is going to go to jail for less than 5 years at most and it's because he decrypted a hash for Chelsea Manning

He should have just turned himself in instead of hiding in the embassy, bad move

Hashes can't be decrypted, they're the result of a one-way function. The assumed effort, via rainbow table attack, was to crack the hash. Cracking hashes is the process of finding a collision by repeating the one-way function operation across multiple precomputed inputs.

It's not actually been proven it was Assange that was responsible for handling the hash, and the hash was never successfully cracked anyway.

I am aware how hashes work my man I just used the word incorrectly

And I'm sure they have some semblance of evidence of communication if they're taking him to court federal trials are almost always decided before they even get to trial

It's also a conspiracy charge so good luck getting out of that

You can count on that happening. Thats coming next regardless.

DezFranky - April 11, 2019, 11:04 pm

What a shame, I hope he doesn't get murdered. Few responsible people left to risk their lives for freedom

Hindu - April 12, 2019, 12:37 am

USA will treat him like a modern day Osama Bin Laden. Once extradited, we won't hear of him again.

He tears down establishment bullshit. Trump likes him, he'll be fine.

I agree, the embassy escape was a massive "fuck you" to diplomatic norms.

netpulse - April 12, 2019, 7:27 am

Him and Manning have done such retarded stuff tbh.

neight - April 12, 2019, 9:15 am

It's about time they arrest him - but I don't care really. I like how he exposed government information.

GnosticPlayers - April 12, 2019, 11:53 am

We all know for a fact that the UK will definitely hand him over to the US, like usual with these cases. If he goes to the US, who knows what stuff the CIA & FBI will do to him. There must be some way to prevent this from happening.

Winterchill - April 12, 2019, 10:12 pm

Freedom is just an illusion my friends, few individuals cannot break the wheel that was built 2 centuries ago. One man does not make an army, any of you, if not all actually cared about individual freedom, you would have done something, but all you do is scratch few things on the forums, pretending to look cool.

But aye, sucks for the Assange, he did quite few things to expose conspiracies, but people were just afraid to support his idea.

Cheers,
Winter \o

Let us read and hear about your great stories of sticking it to the man (government). I'm really looking forward to reading your tales of great adventures and how many glorious battles you have won against the government for freedoms.

RIP Assange, enjoy the steamed foods for the next, rest of your life.

Unkind_ - April 15, 2019, 9:41 am

I have to agree with this idea that he at least deserves the mess he is in now if it is true that his parent company went after and tried exposing the corruption in Ecuador. However, I don't understand why he of all people would not have tried to have found a better country to live in or negotiate for different terms to his asylum. He had already pissed them off in previous times in which he was "Making comments which would alter the ability of countries to work freely". In other words, he would tweet or expose something in a different country even though in his asylum terms it stated he wasn't supposed to be doing any of that. They even shut his internet off several times because he couldn't follow the terms of his agreement. IMO he dug this hole himself when he agreed to live there, and I theorize in retribution he did some stupid shit which only pissed them off more.

I believe defecating inside the embassy counts as being mentally ill.
