Thread: Anyone Into Cosplay

scam. - April 18, 2019, 4:49 am

Recently fallen into the fandom of cosplay. Joined some local community groups and have gone to a couple meetups. Really enjoying it so far. Still trying to get used to wearing stockings though. My leg hairs makes it somewhat uncomfortable. May have to shave.

Anyone here into cosplaying? I'd love to see some of your work. Heres my most recent cosplay. Threw this together for a meet last saturday.

I'd recommend shaving but after a while you get annoyed at the shaving scabs. I'd recommend getting thicker stockings to hide them though <3

I've found it works a lot better.

In the aisle at most stores where the women's leg shaving cream is they have a male shaving lotion at popular retail stores or you can order online. I've also been told you can use conditioner to avoid razor rash and lotion or essential oils to make your legs softer so the bottoms you wear are far more comfortable. :)

I'm basically Belle Delphine but don't spread the word. Cosplaying is my thingy.

PS. You can't be a cosplayer without shaving your leg hair first. smh

I wouldn't say I'm into it, but I drunkenly agreed to soberly cosplay as Kaguya from Love is War. I don't like doing things half assed so I have to shave my body and facial hair, and I got the makeup products and practiced applying it.

Just need the wig, clothes, and contact lenses now.

Have I ever told you that you look like a school shooter?

Kimitoh - August 29, 2019, 9:03 pm

Cosplayed as kakashi for my grad in hs lol

Hey, you should get an epilator if you plan to have a few months of dense cosplaying!!! I have used it for my legs and I had to do it a few times to get all the hairs, but it is nice in the long run than shaving. Just so you know what it is, it a bunch of tweezers on a rotating head. So it will pull the hairs out from the blub instead of cutting the shaft. Then, when it grows back in, it grows in soft! Three downsides are that it is a little painful in the instant until you get majority of the hair removed and learn to tolerate the feeling. Also, it doesn't leave you with the smooth shaved feel. You will want to put vitamin E or some calming cream on your legs after to call the brief period of agitation where the hairs were pulled. But it goes away and you can scrub and smoothe your legs the next day if needed. That was really only significant the first time though for me and I have very sensitive skin. Pros, the hairs will grow back smoothly (but cons, it will be slower than shaving so this is more of a commitment). And if anyone gives you problems, just say that you had to shave because you are swimming a lot, or that it's a side effect of a medicine you take and don't want to discuss it (patchy hair loss).

Sometimes I do some light cosplay in conventions and such, the community creeps me out, maybe it's just where I live but most cosplayers here are cringy as fuck

Most of my ex-girlfriends have all been cosplayers. I probably wouldn't date a normie girl that wasn't into cosplay.
