Not bad for amateurs at all. I can tell what you're going for, some cole bennett type shit, I recommend trying to find your own editing style than just going for someone else's look. If you didn't draw inspiration from him, look him up he's really good at this type of editing. Didn't really bring anything new, and if you were going for trippy this wouldn't trip anyone out. Music is pretty boring. 4/10. Not tryna roast or anything it can just be improved on. Melodic sad trap soundcloud shit is out already, and I hate seeing more people trying to jump on its wave. Be original.

I really like the style of editing. I know you hired someone to do it but its still pretty nice. For the music the guy above is right. You'll probably need to find something else.

Its not that you aren't good its just dying out and all the other artists are already dominating it.

You could post in the right section first.

What people mean with being original is basically the manifestation of one's true self into the music through inspiration generated by other people, but creativity generated through own's subconscious mind.

That's a sure way to get big in music and have people respect you if you already have acquired the skills to make your songs sound good.

However, if you do this all for fun, then nothing even matters, keep doing it.
