But honestly since the "reputation" system on all other boards stands for reputation, I doubt new users will know the difference.

What purpose does popularity have really, any thoughts on just removing it entirely?

Positive:Hack Forums Rules Da Universe! <-- I truly think this one should be added, it's a long time HF staple! (This one could also have multiple variations, such as abbreviating HF, not making every starting letter capital, etc.. Whatever one you decide on)

The solution to your problem is the "Log Out" button.

Sometimes I think the warning system was made just for you.

I really miss one which many people will probably use.

"I like you"

Right now there's "I love you" and "High quality member" but both go too far rather than just "liking" a member. The negative rep already has "I dislike you", so why not the positive side of it as well? :)

Anyways, a few more suggestions:

"I like your way of thinking!"
"There's something called "Google", use it."
"We're not your personal army."
"You're a waste of time"

Also, I think the "Froggy" and "Nyx-" ones should be removed, because the user base of HF is still renewing a lot, and many people might not know who they are.

Something to do with signatures would be cool. I wanted to rep someone earlier for their cool Crash Override signature but remembered that there wasn't an option. I thought about this thread and thought I would drop the idea here.

"Love your sig"

"Awesome signature"

"Your signature is dope"

etc. etc.
