Thread: Google results shifting.

Mr. Robot - May 10, 2019, 10:09 pm

About 2hours ago I googled
FUSION GPS

It had 55,500,000 results.

2 hours later, refreshing the still open page -
54,300,000

Spooky fbi cover up.

Joking of course but never seen that before

Now it's 3 minutes after making thread
54,100,000

Now it's 8 minutes after making thread
53,900,000

--Wish I could export all results and compare whats missing

--Lets do exact only and see what happens
"FUSION GPS"
1,860,000

WWWWWWWWTTTTTTTTFFFFFFFFFFFF

within 5 seconds it went to 667,000

debian - May 10, 2019, 10:23 pm

This is pretty interesting. Unfortunately Google would never let you access 50 million results and compare data.

Slim - May 10, 2019, 10:48 pm

What is the significance of this particular search term?

RegistrarFBI - May 10, 2019, 10:51 pm

sooner you learn google is a monopoly the better off you be.

I feel like that's pretty well known... very obvious observation. It's not a good thing but it is what it is.

Yeah what this man said. Fuck Google and large corporations. I'm going to use my own personal search engine.

Spoiler \(Click to View\)/s

BTC - May 10, 2019, 11:05 pm

Weird. Very very weird.

Perhaps these numbers are fake and Google never truly gives you the results unless it's under a reasonable amount. Not sure, I'm probably wrong but I can't imagine WTF they are doing in their system to cause this..

Yeah this same user was posting some dumb ass shit on another thread. I guess he either got banned and wants to take his anger out on new account, or probably just brain dead.

I have him on my blacklist but I saw his reply because the other user replied to him lol. I vote we all ignore this RegistarFBI kid lol. Super annoying and cannot form his own opinions it seems.

ASLR - May 11, 2019, 5:47 am

Did you search anything else or visit any other sites between searches? I think it takes into account your prior searches (within a time window) and your online activity (to sites that they can track, such as those using their advertising service) to learn context about what you're looking for in order to narrow down search results

Can tell you right now it's not dependent on the search times.

Lynx - May 11, 2019, 6:39 am

Google probably changes your results depending on what you have searched before, in this case the same thing?
I don't know. Weird.

Isn't it because sites are changing all the time? Text gets added/erased and it affects the SEO?
I'm sure websites update or get edit each second as we speak.

Specific result regarding this - you'd think it would hit other results as much too.

It's changing constantly.

They're responsible for buying and providing a fake dossier on Trump which caused all this fake Russia collusion investigations, with the help of Hillary Clinton.

AeroBlue - May 11, 2019, 8:45 am

Yea google is constantly pruning websites with their automated AI systems, its actually crazy how many websites they index simultaneously.

4158996621556 - May 11, 2019, 8:45 am

trump tryna hide some stuff.
NO COLLUSION NO OBSTRUCTION

b?xxy - May 11, 2019, 8:46 am

I'm showing About 47,000,000 results (0.47 seconds) if that means anything

4158996621556 - May 11, 2019, 8:46 am witnessed it go down by a couple mil...we're at 39.8 mil, creepy!

b?xxy - May 11, 2019, 8:47 am

Well, when it put it in quotes I see About 714,000 results (0.42 seconds)

Lol, I was going to ask the same thing. I would simply Google it, but as you can see, If you Google
"FUSION GPS" apparently you don't get accurate results

EDIT: Scratch that... Just google it lol

Pretty sure Google was fined under some kind of anti-monopoly stature at some point in 2017.

Takehito Morokuzu - May 11, 2019, 12:03 pm

About 53,600,000 results (0.30 seconds)
It stays the same for me no matter how many times I search it.

Decided to touch back on this out of curiosity as for the differences.

Wtf is this?? I am not editing this, got no reason to, obviously.

but what's with these results man. Correct me if I'm wrong, but that's not the correct format either ?

Shouldn't it be 48,000,000? So weird.

Try both with capitals and quotes

Mark it, then check it in a few hours.

I tried to compare with capitals, and even randomized like this "FusloN GpS" and there was no difference in terms of results at that current time. But I will attempt to see what it's like a few hours apart.

Within 2 days time it went from showing 39,1 million to 48 million. Then that format breaking is just even more confusing to me.

Let's see what my results are in a few hours ?

Yeah I agree, seems like they are just having some issues with that new AI implementation, or maybe it's something else, I honestly wouldn't know. But there is definitely someone at Google offices who fucked up.

The amount of employees they have, you would think they would already know about this issue.

Here is results from Japan in comparison!

Huh, interesting.. maybe it gives a random number of search results. We'll never know.

ASLR - May 12, 2019, 7:39 am

There's also got to be some sort of rounding or approximation going on. What are the odds of there being 58 million results vs. 58 million and six, for example
