Thread: I have adware

BI?ckhat - May 13, 2019, 8:09 pm

Every 20-30m my browser will open a random fake windows alert trying to get me to click it, sometimes just ad pages, etc. I usually just close them and continue on with what i'm doing but its starting to get annoying.

There are a few processes open, but I either get access denied when trying to close them, or when I close them they simply reopen.

I will appreciate any help

Here is a basic list of things you can try, let me know if the issue persists.
Download Malware Bytes and scan your entire computer.

Go to 'Add or remove programs' and try to locate the AdWare (might be there too)

Chrome: Settings - Advanced - Reset to Default

Right click on Chrome and check if any fields in there (e.g. Target) are modified

Well I found it in add or remove but I wasn't able to remove it. I manually scanned the folder it was located in and I think Malwarebytes took care of it. I appreciate your help man, I don't know why I didn't think of that

Open it on the safe mode and do that same thing as our member said

Oooh this helped me get the last thing that was popping a notification up. Thank you I was able to delete that in safe mode.
