Excuse my ignorance, but what exactly is being output by your program.

The user inputs valid IMAP credentials, for example, and a filter, say 'account'.

What results are actually returned to them?

You say accounts, information, etc are extracted, but I don't entirely understand what this means. Are you extracting usernames and passwords somehow? Or is it something else?

It will scan the entire inbox and look for emails containing specific phrases, like in your example "account". If this phrase is found, it will download the complete email to a previously selected folder. There you can easily extract the information you are looking for.

- 1) Yes!
- 2) No, the target doesn't need to execute anything.
- 3) You just need to fill in the data and my Software will extract the desired EMail from those inboxes.

qonix - September 18, 2019, 5:22 am
