Hehe so you are promoting True Demons book ?

Nice; sadly don't see him around hackforums as much.

 DEAL WITH EXTREME CAUTION ***

I am the original author of this work, putting out a warning for users that come to this thread later. Just so everyone is aware, I am NOT promoting or reselling my book through anyone other than Amazon/Kindle (paperback/e-book).

This is the official place where the book is for sale.

Whoever this guy is, he is most likely attempting to resell without authorization or distributing malware using my book. Even if this is not the case, there are better learning materials available elsewhere. While the free edition still exists in some form, it is outdated and not a professionally authored/published book that is neither being actively maintained nor distributed.

I would encourage people to buy books written by experienced security professionals only from trustworthy resellers. Since HackForums closed & deleted my official sales threads, I have not been putting it out there.

As always, remember to deal with caution when dealing with any user on HackForums or on the internet.

Particularly, brand new accounts that are not considered reputable. Remember to read the Help Docs!

Sorry, homie. I got my OSCP, a job and moved on. For people truly passionate about security and penetration testing, HF will always just be a newbie trap.

Gotta get out there into the real hacking community and see what it has to offer. Maybe we can meet up at DefCon or something. Cheers. ?

Congrats on the certification and the job! I know it's a rather busy life and tons of work, but the community needs users who are respected, certified, and working in the field to show that there are legal ways to hack and be paid for it.
