Jk. I'll buy one in the future though. Pretty good odds, Omni!

To be fair, they can get that 250k big prize from buying more scratch cards with these 5k Bytes if they're really lucky haha.

You mean 9 boxes to scratch, right? I mean there aren't only 9 scratchcards to be given.

The odds are fair. There is a good chance that people will get at least most of their money back in bytes.

At a $10/1k byte rate, most you can lose is like $50. Not too bad ?

I don't really like the gambling/game updates but I guess it helps getting people addicted to the forums and increase the userbase. It will also be a good income boost for Omniscient.

Sorry, you might not like this comment, just my honest opinion.

Just a question. Why don't you like the game?

The game is free to play, but it allows you to use bytes if you want to faster level up (It's even more fun to play without using bytes since the game will last longer)

Anyway, the scratch cards was launched over 3 months ago. Maybe it was time with a update? I still see your point, it's not everyone's cup of tea.

The game is simple and if you'd really want to play a game like this there are plenty of them which are much more advanced. Most people play this for their forum status/awards/bytes I think. I think these updates don't really make the site better quality but are just a good way for Omni to generate extra income. I like updates that stimulate people to post better content, share knowledge and educate people. Of course, there is some room for fun, but to me, gambling and a simple clicking game isn't fun, just addictive.

It's just my opinion, I know it does well because since the Bytes system the forums became more active. I think I'm just getting old EDIT: The contract system is a really good thing btw. Was mainly talking about Bytes, Games and gambling which I think isn't great.

You'd have to be pretty unlucky to lose that bad though. I just did some calculations and the odds for this card are actually pretty good for this card!

These are the estimated winnings for one of these cards. Not too bad seeing as you'll most likely get around 20k Bytes from these cards.

All in all I'd say this really is a great scratch card to purchase if you're looking to win some quick Bytes, considering it will most likely almost double your winnings compared to the $25 card :)

At the current prices of bytes being somewhere around $7/1000

You're making $40 more worth with the scratchcard (assuming you don't get unlucky and hit on something lower than average return).

$$20000 \times 0.007 = $140$$

Definitely a more viable option for buying bytes in bulk if you're feeling lucky and don't want to wait around for a big bytes holder to sell to you.

All in all, you can think of this card as only being $70 because even if you get the lowest payout (5000 bytes) that's worth about $30.

I don't think this graph is quite right. Ok so let's assume that somebody with standard luck buys 100 Scratchcards for 10.000 dollars.
42 of them will win 5000 bytes
40 of them will win 10.000 bytes
10 of them will win 25.000 bytes
5 of them will win 50.000 bytes
2 of them will win 100.000 bytes
1 of them will win 250.000 bytes

$(42 \times 5000) + (40 \times 10.000) + (10 \times 25.000) + (5 \times 50.000) + (2 \times 100.000) + (1 \times 250.000) = 1.560.000$ bytes

So, our guy spent 10.000 dollars and got 1.560.000 bytes in exchange
If he had spent 1 dollar he would have got 156 bytes in exchange
Furthermore, If he had spent 6.5 dollars he would have got 1000 bytes in exchange

I think this is a nice feature to have. More money, no loss guaranteed. However if HF itself sells bytes for 6.5$ per 1k average then the marketplace is going to drop down to at least 5- 5.5$ per 1k. If the price drops down to 5$ per 1k, then selling bytes in bulk will be about 4$ per 1k or even less. Having said that, this is going to hurt scratchcards selling in the long term. Why would someone want to buy 10$ worth of scratchcard in order to get back 1000 bytes in average when he can just buy them for 4$ per 1k from the marketplace. So,my opinion is that it's a nice feature short term,however long term,you are probably going to lose more money than you can acquire now selling these scratchcards.However if this feature is limited edition only,then it's worth for you guys.I am not trying to be a smartass here. I am just voicing out (actually just typing) my opinion. If I did the math wrong and the whole equation is wrong,I am sorry,I feel a bit sleepy

So do I. Those type of updates are great. That's why the Bytes system was created and why I continue to nourish it.

Bytes are multi-faceted for the site. They are used primarily as a rewards system. The Hack Game is about stickiness and giving members more of a reason to be on HF other than just posting.

If there is anything that's old on HF it's awards. I'm not sure they have the same appeal they did years ago.

HF is a struggle. We can't stay the same but we can't go too far out of our comfort zone either. I can only try to do what I think is right for the site. Doing nothing is not an option.

I can't speak for anyone else, but since I've returned to the forum a month ago from a year and a half break the hack game and bytes system has 100% kept me coming back on the forum daily.

The game is great because since it's so new it gives people an incentive to catch on early and try to be top of the leaderboards and while you await a cool down there's almost no reason not to "view new" and see what else is happening on the forum.

Bytes are nice because blackjack and slots are fun - regardless of the GUI (lol). Sure I'm at a net loss but it's mindless entertainment and they're still cheap so no reason not to keep playing, especially with knowing the money is going towards further development of the site.

That's the full intent of the Hack Game. When the project is fully realized and integrated into HF it's going to change everything in ways members don't even see yet. Just as the HF Contracts system has imho altered our Marketplace so will the Hack Game alter forum activity. There is a lot of things we can do to integrate the play with the forums.

Which is used to pay for further development and my time I spend on HF as well as HF services.

So do I. Those type of updates are great. That's why the Bytes system was created and why I continue to nourish it.

Bytes are multi-faceted for the site. They are used primarily as a rewards system. The Hack Game is about stickiness and giving members more of a reason to be on HF other than just posting.

If there is anything that's old on HF it's awards. I'm not sure they have the same appeal they did years ago.

HF is a struggle. We can't stay the same but we can't go too far out of our comfort zone either. I can only try to do what I think is right for the site. Doing nothing is not an option.

I agree with almost everything you're saying here and I'm really happy that you have the right vision. I was doubting it at some point because it started feeling like a situation where you were just trying to get as much out of HF while it lasted. I just hoped the byte system would be used to reward people for sharing interesting/educative stuff that helps this community. Now it's mostly used for trading awards/gambling/the game.

I still hope that people can make threads where they sell an e-book with knowledge for like 50 bytes per person. This would to me be a really good solution to motivate people to write educative things and get rewarded for it.

$1\%+2\%+5\%+10\%+40\%+42\% = 100\%$

Calculate all percentages and you get 100% of winning something

Because those are not $100.

The one you buy only with Bytes would become a Bytes factory and the $25 one already has solid win percentages.

Not sure what you mean.. But it's the same, but on the other cards you have a chance of losing
Example on the $25 card = 28,445% chance of losing on the card after calculating all win percentages

Kind of weird how they weren't meant to have monetary value, but yet they sell faster then awards.

I guess this $100 scratch card doesn't intend on them being worth anything right? :P I think that alone gives the stigma of them being worth a monetary value

Yes, this $100 cards' intent is to encourage people to support the forums. Not to make bytes worth anything.

"It's important to note that Bytes are NOT a currency. They are a rewards sytem for the site and meant for fun and entertainment only. If members begin to use these as a currency that's their own usage and unrelated to the intent or how HF will use them. "

Read up on what bytes are and why they were implemented -
<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5856115>

Awards also have $0 monetary value, hence why the award market only supports bytes and not crypto transactions. So that comparison was irrelevant? Or atleast I'm not sure what that was meant to prove.

If bytes were meant to hold value, then you would expect to be able to "cash" them out directly from HF (omni) for the equivalent $USD. Hit you can't. Because they are essentially worthless in the eyes of HF.

$250 \times 7 = $1750.$

Not sure how you came up with $35,000.... somehow you did 7×5000 ... where tf did 5000 come from.

Also it's sorta off topic but, couldn't we have a live chat stream for memeber only, it will declutter the site and leave less threads being posted that ain't OC, quick stream live chat for quick answers.
