WhatTheGox - May 23, 2019, 5:44 am

EDIT

I notice omniscient doing a lot of effort in advertising HF.

Well omniscient, Mr Professor does a lot of effort in welcoming those exact same new members by scamming them and telling them to fuck off and that what he did is normal on HF.

Omniscient, mr professor costs you funds wether you like it or not, he scams those new members that you paid for getting in here.

My question is simple...

Why doesn't Mr professor gets banned? Is he "special" or something?

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=5972440>

He clearly scammed and social engineered multiple people as you can see in the above thread.

He doesn't care to solve his shit properly and tries to hide behind his thread TOS which is bullshit because his thread is social engineering and misleading people anyways, the contract system should be above that.

In the thread above see multiple victims of him and i'm pretty certain that he made more.

So why is this guy so protected?

Is he a 2nd account from Staff?

Friend from staff?

Are high donators protected here, is he one?

It can't be that he's contributing a lot to the community, he only has sales and exchange threads up. I'm very curious what the deal is with this guy exactly.

The.Businessman - May 23, 2019, 5:49 am

It's how it works here. People sell ebooks and make their tos in a way that you can't get a refund even if you didn't receive anything.

It's baffling how people lack common sense, If he makes XXXXX per month, Why sell for $40?

James Burnham - May 23, 2019, 5:52 am

No, nobody is protected or special here. Many ex-"mentors" got closed. Previous staff member got marketplace banned. If Professor really scams, then the victims have to make a better effort in proving it. They have to include screenshots and explain in an easy to understand manner what happened.

AngrySpencer - May 23, 2019, 5:55 am

he should be banned, no doubt

That is not possible, i'm sure he will then report those people for leaking and get them banned lol.

I got scammed few days ago and I got banished for it xD

I was new to the forum, didn't know about rules and anything, but I made a deal that didn't involve a contract (I didn't knew they even existed) and I got banished for not using them.

Even though I can't find any traces of it's being a rule violation not to use contracts.

However I can find that it says contracts are recommended, but not bullet proof.. but nothing about it being a violation not using it..

So.. kinda funny way to get banished.. for being too new to this forum xD

So you create a new account and ban evade, guess what happens to people that do that? They get banned....

My first ban was unjustified, there are no rules to support that banishment, and neither is it nice nor logical to throw out new members for minor things that isn't even dangerous.

It's not like I tried to hack admins, spread viruses and completely ruin the forum..

I was trying to buy something and I got banished because I got scammed..

AeroBlue - May 23, 2019, 6:09 am

I would tread carefully on this topic if I were you, there are a lot of things in this world that should happen, but won't. I hate to see people fall for things like this as well but hopefully, they will learn their lesson at some point.

I hope you realize there doesn't need to be reason or rules to justify your ban, also you are not entitled to be made aware of.

Yes, maybe this will happen if the evidence is weak. I have seen a lot of scammers getting closed because some victims put effort in putting the pieces together and helping others understand what happened. If you just make angry comments that are hard to read and you also leak, you will be considered as a flamer/leaker.

While in the meanwhile the scammers get protected, and the victim who is in panick gets banned? or so it seems?

People are banned for breaking rules. Simple as that.

Nobody here is "protected"

TCP - May 23, 2019, 6:20 am

Most of his disputes are either resolved or contested, as a rule of matter ebooks are never worth buying but people still believe in get-rich-quick schemes

And it's not against the rules to social engineer the community, false advertise a product (therefore scam) and not properly dealing with a deal dispute of an officially site created contract?

It's the same as selling Harry potter books as horror books.
It's scamming

When he almost gets banned he refunds, however this last deal dispute is not resolved and he is also not planning on doing so.

The moment a staff disputed on him he instantly refunded lol, he clearly picks who to refund and who not based on community status.

In the meanwhile he continues selling the same shit so only new members get tricked into buying since old members are smart enough not to buy his crap.

Would you ban a seller just because a buyer screams SCAMMER ? That would be unfair. Also that would result in tons of multi accounters posting threads where they accuse people of scams and they wouldn't need to prove anything. Just scream SCAM and tell everyone how hurt they feel.

AeroBlue - May 23, 2019, 6:26 am

idk why people can't leave this alone, it's been exhausted so many times and ends up in the OP getting closed

Even a staff disputed on him at one point.

It's not like 1 buyer is screaming scammer, A LOT of buyers are screaming that he's scamming including STAFF.

The issue is that he chooses to refund based on community status, that staff got refunded within minutes i believe.

It's like what i said on the first page.

Why are you so protective of him anyways lol, you really support shit like this?

You can read all the rules and guidelines within the Help Docs and RANF.

Quote:It's the same as selling Harry potter books as horror books.

Sure, you are free to believe this. If you presented a reasonable amount of evidence in a deal dispute, that is all you can do. Whether the user is banned or not is entirely up to the staff. It is not their job to get involved in deal disputes, most times they can be resolved without having staff getting involved.

Eagle 95 - May 23, 2019, 6:35 am

1. All deals on HF are at your own risk, we do not get involved.
2. New members get a welcoming PM saying they should use contracts. Very few of them do.
3. If a contract is disputed, then AGAIN it's between the members.

People don't want to learn the system and then later complain.

isu - May 23, 2019, 6:40 am

Mr Professor is using really shady marketing tactics. Not to mention him trying to scam me out of 10$ (lol) on another forum.

sonex - May 23, 2019, 6:41 am

Are you dumb? Nobody is pointing a gun to your head telling you "go buy that". You showed 5 out of 500 customers that disputed contract, how is that even logically enough to make you come to conclusion of banning someone? Use your brain next time before you start with the bullshit. It's solely your own decision to buy/not buy and to dispute/not dispute, dont get involved in drama that kids tend to start on HF daily.

Edit : Threads you linked are a fucking joke. So are you.
