Thread: Uber | UberEats - BYPASS Fake GPS Detection - Increase your earnings!

Farmer John - May 29, 2019, 3:06 am

If any of you guys Uber or UberEats driver tried to fake your GPS location you probably ended up with a message like that:

I'm selling my own method to bypass the detection, I have been using it for the past 2 months without any issue.

Only requirement is an Android 7.x or 8.x phone, I will teach you the rest step-by-step live.

Even though it is possible to use it to increase the length of a trip I do not recommend it, this method has only be tested to instantly get back to "busy areas" (airports, downtown, etc...) or "skipping the lines" of restaurants.

I'm selling the method for $150 in BTC, this include the setup and unlimited support.

If you know any Uber/UberEats drivers refer them to me and I'll pay you a commission (PM for more details).

For example with UberEats, the closest driver to the restaurant will receive the order so by faking your GPS you can instantly set your location to the closest restaurant as soon as you finished your delivery, that way you'll receive an order sooner and make more money, you can even set your location on the exact GPS coordinate of the restaurant and therefore "skip the line" of a busy restaurant where there is always other drivers waiting close by.

Also works well to get in the Airports line for Uber.

$150 is too expensive for this method.

$30 is the most I'd pay for this...

spaceynyc - October 17, 2019, 4:39 pm

i'm interested in this as I do UberEats but like the guy above me said, it's a bit too expensive, especially for something i'm not even sure will actually work or not to increase the amount of money I make.

also what lines at restaurants are you referring to?
