About the Game:

Code The MarketGlory Story

A major unprecedented economic crisis has just hit the Earth 24 hours ago, and, according to our sources, the Governments cannot deal with its consequences. Apparently, all the major national banks have already entered into collapse, and the officials do not seem to know how to manage this situation. People have occupied the streets, and thousands are protesting in front of the Government and Parliament buildings. Most of the tv and radio stations have stopped broadcasting, and the main newspapers are under assault, as people are furious for not being told the truth about the state of things.

Although financial analysts have launched a series of warnings in the past five years in regard to the improper administration of funds and the constantly increasing amount of debt, Governments all over the world kept refusing to adjust their economic policy, while hiding the real consequences of their decisions. Instead of working to come up with a plan to stabilize the national economies, Governments chose to contract new debt, ignoring the long-term effects of this approach, and oblivious to the fact that assuming debt over and over again without being able to pay it, would not salvage, but crash the economy. The superficial attitude of the officials, and their inability to foresee the outcome of this disastrous lack of professionalism, as well as their devious manipulation techniques have contributed to this economic crisis that has now affected the global economy and caused riots in all the major cities of the world. Reports coming from all over the Earth state that an alarming violence wave has gotten out of control, as the military forces can no longer deal with the rage of people that have lost in just a day everything they worked for an entire life. As our informers have explained, what started out as peaceful demonstrations turned into utter and complete chaos, as information regarding the complexity of the crisis leaked.

The simultaneous fall of the Governments in countries across the Globe is a premiere - never in history have we witnessed such a fall of the mighty. Left with no money and no leaders to clear things up, it is no wonder that people react instinctively. One thing is a certainty - the past 24 hours turned out to be the most violent and confusing day of all times.

Update: Codename – MarketGlory

There is still hope! Just an hour ago, an official statement released by the spokesperson of the Secret Services shows that there might be a way to stop this chaos, as a recently declassified project designed by the brightest minds in the economical field could restore order. Known under the codename MarketGlory, this project aims at developing and stabilizing the global economy. Afer more than 7 hours of negotiations, the Governments of the world have decided to adhere to the project proposed by the experts. It is official - from now on, the economical strategies will follow the same direction and use the same principles of transparency and correctitude, and countries will not be able to borrow money from each other in order to stop the vicious circle created by debt.
