Thread: I have a job and money but I still shop lift

doxerhacker - June 18, 2019, 9:40 pm

I'm an electrical engineer that shop lifts for the thrill and dopamine rush

Last night I stole a $250 bench hoodie simply by carving off the price tag in the fitter room, putting it on then walking out.

I also stole tail lights by using a blade to cut them out of the plastic, then I put them in my hand and walked out in plain sight.

Does anyone else shop lift? I don't ever steal from people, although one could argue shop lifting is a form of stealing when it comes to individuals as employees are punished if anything is stolen on their watch. Fuck corporations THUG MAXXX

They're stupid... Why would you have dish washer soap as hand soap in the bathroom? Dawn dish soap is really good at removing grease and such from hands and clothing.

I use it quite frequently in my line of work.

I use this honestly you should try the switch, it doesn't leave your hands dryer than hell and I use it for anytime I work on a vehicle.

No because hoodies and shit ain't worth the 200+ dollar fees for getting caught stealing from a company as well as court fines for if you get caught.

Yeah we have gojo at the shop, I personally don't care for it too much. I prefer THIS shit right here, a gift from the gods themselves... But, at the house, I use dawn. Mainly because it's always available lol.

If you are in the US, this country was literally founded on theft, robbery, and violence.

I'll never understand this thrill people get from shoplifting things.

But if you're being sincere about being these things listed then you ought to be ashamed and seek help with this shoplifting nonsense. You're a grown up and it's time you behaved like it. You're setting a bad example for those with malleable minds.

I'm more successful than most people.

You're being 'dumb and pointless'. Me being sweet about telling someone not to shoplift isn't dumb. Frankly you're being an idiotic unevolved sleeping dumby. You failed to have the intelligence to see the point in why I said what I said. Furthermore you will probably fail to see the point in what I'm saying now because you can't get past your Savage impulse of thinking I was dumb because you idiotically see it as socially unnecessary.

I used to steal nice knives from Wal-Mart back in the day and sell them to high school buddies who wanted a nice knife. Made a good profit.
