Thread: Get more edits on a massive thread?

Respect - June 28, 2019, 11:03 am

I've been steadily updating my thread on ChainLink here, and I had no idea there was a limit of 15 edits (In my 7 years of HF I've never edited a thread this much)

This project is still just getting started, I originally posted the thread at .38 cents and now it's at $3.41 on Coinbase.

CoinBase just listed it for retail buyers, which is big news, but I can no longer update the thread with new integrations and other news.

Seeing as it's the #1 most Viewed and replied to thread in the Crypto forum right now I'm wondering if I can keep updating somehow?

Looks like you have to be a steady seller of one particular product, which I'm not. I just sell social media accounts every so often. Omni read this thread and didn't reply so I guess that's that.

That's not true, check Vendor list here. Check out this thread or apply here

You can buy a sticky or a tag, it should give you more edits during the duration of it.

Won't happen. Many already suggested ideas to get edits but no outcome on users favor.

Only way for you to get more edits to either apply for Vendor, get accepted and buy-it, or for it to be stuck.

So instead we (we noobs) should make doublets of threads instead? Naah it isn't a solution either and frankly that would make it more messy for Omni to manage. I have at least one thread that Im forced to make a doublets in the near future, because of major changes, unless there is a workaround for this that dont involves $
