

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Is it me or most Youtubers talk too slowly?

James Burnham - July 13, 2019, 7:21 am

I am watching most tutorial videos at 1.25x because at 1.00 they are too casual and slow. What about you?

flavoral - July 13, 2019, 7:25 am louder and slower. It's so they can target kids who are overhyped and stretch the video to +10min to get more ad placement in the video.

James Burnham - July 13, 2019, 7:27 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:25 AM)flavoral Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) louder and slower. It's so they can target kids who are overhyped and stretch the video to +10min to get more ad placement in the video.

Yeah, I also noticed that they make the videos longer than it is needed. Does that really make them more money though? Don't people end up un-subbing when they find out you waste their time?

Debugger - July 13, 2019, 7:27 am well actually there is much difference about written tutorial & live doing especially when he making a video for his channel he will try his best to make it perfect in minimum takes so maybe that's why he just doing carefully or also depends that maybe your fast learner ?

Spaark - July 13, 2019, 7:30 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:25 AM)flavoral Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) louder and slower. It's so they can target kids who are overhyped and stretch the video to +10min to get more ad placement in the video.

Its almost as if they're marketing themselves for the children watching!

Ivex - July 13, 2019, 7:33 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:27 AM)Burnham Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah, I also noticed that they make the videos longer than it is needed. Does that really make them more money though? Don't people end up un-subbing when they find out you waste their time? Yes, a lot more money is made from 10 min+ videos. And frequent viewers of YouTubers are accustomed to videos being stretched to 10 mins.

4158996621556 - July 13, 2019, 7:33 am

they need to hit that 10 minute mark its the new strategy to keep the vid longer but yea honestly u can kinda watch any vid on 1.25x because it speeds it up just enough for it to be still understandable and save some time too.

tutorial vids are the absolute worst they b like this: bad intro
hello everyone its me [sponsors channel name] back at it again with another tutorial video
this time were doing a tutorial on [tutorial subject/video title]. many ppl have suggested it to me
so i thought hey i could help some ppl out by doing this tutorial, so if u do run into this problem and this video does help u out, then DONT FORGET TO SMASH THE LIKE BUTTON!!! WITH YOUR FOREHEAD and if youve just found my channel, then DONT FORGET TO SUBSCRIBE because i upload [upload schedule] oh and youtubes new update doesnt always notify u when i upload every tutorial ever so dont forget to HIT THE BELL NEAR the subscribe button and

so ull get notified of all the latest tutorials. so yeah as i said today we are doing a tutorial on [tutorial subject] so lets jump right into it slowly clicks and explains every single little detail like every viewer is 3 year old 3 clicks and 1 option changed for all the tutorial, total time to do it: 49 seconds
so yea as you guys can see i dont have [problem the video is about] anymore it all is fine and hopefully if you were smart enough to follow along then...you probably fixed it too so as u guys can see i am a trusted person and
u should HIT THE LIKE BUTTON if this video did help you out and SUBSCRIBE TO my channel if it helped you out and dont forget to HIT THE BELL BUTTON if you want to be notified whenever the next tutorial comes out
my name is [channel name] and peace out bad outro
total time: 10:01
time needed to actually follow the tutorial: 49 seconds

nowadays the first place i look for tutorials isnt even youtube, i just look it up online because websites dont ask me to hit the like button and subscribe 10 times
(if theres nothing online then i look it on yt). pause the vid immediately, check description, maybe the written version is there. no? ok then watch the video sped up 2x and place my cursor on the time bar so i can see WHENS THE FIRST SECOND THAT THE YOUTUBER MOVES THE MOUSE CURSOR so i know somethings about to happen

dont watch tutorials on youtube woof

debian - July 13, 2019, 7:34 am

It's quite annoying that yoytube on mobile doesn't have the option to change speed

flavoral - July 13, 2019, 7:42 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:27 AM)Burnham Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yeah, I also noticed that they make the videos longer than it is needed. Does that really make them more money though? Don't people end up un-subbing when they find out you waste their time?

Yes. short videos mostly only have 1 ad-break, videos longer than 10min have multiple ad-breaks. Which can make the creator a lot more money.

Nah it used to be where people used to be called out sell-outs for adding too many ad-breaks, but now it became the normal with all the demonetizations. People got used to it, and most understand that. However there are unwritten rules like for example for a 10-20min video usually creators only put between 3-5 ad-breaks. That doesn't mean that there aren't people who abuse it tho

ririki - July 13, 2019, 7:42 am

Yeah, I agree.

That's why I stopped watching most of these bad channels.

flavoral - July 13, 2019, 7:44 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:30 AM)Spaark Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Its almost as if they're marketing themselves for the children watching!

You need to target kids if you want to grow on any social media. They're the best demographic for monetization. They will easily buy all your shit over-priced merch, watch all your videos, etc...

Spaark - July 13, 2019, 7:46 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:44 AM)flavoral Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) You need to target kids if you want to grow on any social media. They're the best demographic for monetization. They will easily buy all your shit over-priced merch, watch all your videos, etc...

Unlike us, most adults don't spend shitloads of time on the internet. Kids do... kinda sucks for us as the most popular content is often babyfood.

James Burnham - July 13, 2019, 7:49 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:33 AM)HackingDoge Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) they need to hit that 10 minute mark its the new strategy to keep the vid longer

but yea honestly u can kinda watch any vid on 1.25x because it speeds it up just enough for it to be still understandable and save some time too.

tutorial vids are the absolute worst they b like this: bad intro
hello everyone its me [sponsors channel name] back at it again with another tutorial video
this time were doing a tutorial on [tutorial subject/video title]. many ppl have suggested it to me
so i thought hey i could help some ppl out by doing this tutorial, so if u do run into this problem and this video does help u out, then DONT FORGET TO SMASH THE LIKE BUTTON!!! WITH YOUR FOREHEAD and if youve just found my channel, then DONT FORGET TO SUBSCRIBE because i upload [upload schedule] oh and youtubes new update doesnt always notify u when i upload every tutorial ever so dont forget to HIT THE BELL NEAR the subscribe button and
so ull get notified of all the latest tutorials. so yeah as i said today we are doing a tutorial on [tutorial subject] so lets jump right into it slowly clicks and explains every single little detail like every viewer is 3 year old 3 clicks and 1 option changed for all the tutorial, total time to do it: 49 seconds
so yea as you guys can see i dont have [problem the video is about] anymore it all is fine and hopefully if you were smart enough to follow along then...you probably fixed it too so as u guys can see i am a trusted person and
u should HIT THE LIKE BUTTON if this video did help you out and SUBSCRIBE TO my channel if it helped you out and dont forget to HIT THE BELL BUTTON if you want to be notified whenever the next tutorial comes out
my name is [channel name] and peace out bad outro
total time: 10:01
time needed to actually follow the tutorial: 49 seconds

nowadays the first place i look for tutorials isnt even youtube, i just look it up online because websites dont ask me to hit the like button and subscribe 10 times
(if theres nothing online then i look it on yt). pause the vid immediately, check description, maybe the written version is there. no? ok then watch the video sped up 2x and place my cursor on the time bar so i can see WHENS THE FIRST SECOND THAT THE YOUTUBER MOVES THE MOUSE CURSOR so i know somethings about to happen

dont watch tutorials on youtube woofYes, that is basically how the tutorials are. So what do you use alternatively? I think that blogs also have some times crappy content with the correct keywords just to draw you in and make money from ad impressions. Usually, I find quality content on Reddit, Quora and forums but sometimes I need fully detailed guides and not just tips. What do you use most of the times when trying to learn something new?

TheChaosKiller - July 13, 2019, 7:53 am

It's rife with copycats, so when one clocked the fact they needed 10min+ videos for the most advertising, and to be able to put down more view minutes, everyone else started doing it too. It's a welcome departure from those guys that start off with "HEY THERE YOUTUBE, OMG DO I HAVE A GOOD ONE FOR YOU TODAY AHFOWIHEGWJFEFIWOJF" though, I hated that trend of presenting!

ririki - July 13, 2019, 7:54 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:49 AM)Burnham Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yes, that is basically how the tutorials are. So what do you use alternatively? I think that blogs also have some times crappy content with the correct keywords just to draw you in and make money from ad impressions. Usually, I find quality content on Reddit, Quora and forums but sometimes I need fully detailed guides and not just tips. What do you use most of the times when trying to learn something new?

Quora, books.

Reddit for others opinion.

Searching over any search-engine is not so accurate because it serves you what you want to see.

flavoral - July 13, 2019, 7:57 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:46 AM)Spaark Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Unlike us, most adults don't spend shitloads of time on the internet. Kids do... kinda sucks for us as the most popular content is often babyfood.

It has always been like that. It's much easier to target kids than adults. If you go ask any guy or girl from around the same generation, they prob all say they used to watch SpongeBob as a kid, but if you ask them what do they watch now, you gonna find harder time finding a common answer. Also, money becomes more important when you're older so you will most likely gonna rethink couple time before buying that $60 hoodie from some creator.

As we grow, we develop our own personality and become more "calmer". As a kid, all you do is scream, break stuff and run around. However as with this generation, you see more kids not being able to go do all these stuff outside, they turn to watch other people doing it online, for hours which is perfect for content creators.

Spaark - July 13, 2019, 8:00 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:57 AM)flavoral Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) It has always been like that. It's much easier to target kids than adults. If you go ask any guy or girl from around the same generation, they prob all say they used to watch SpongeBob as a kid, but if you ask them what do they watch now, you gonna find harder time finding a common answer. Also, money becomes more important when you're older so you will most likely gonna rethink couple time before buying that $60 hoodie from some creator.

As we grow, we develop our own personality and become more "calmer". As a kid, all you do is scream, break stuff and run around. However as with this generation, you see more kids not being able to go do all these stuff outside, they turn to watch other people doing it online, for hours which is perfect for content creators.

Idk about you flavoral, but I have never brought YouTuber merchandise :') was considering something from pewdiepie because he actually has half a clue in terms of fashion norms... but otherwise i don't see why i'd want to be a walking billboard for some random internet celebrity. They're really not that famous.

edit: I did buy a forsen tshirt, but its because I was quite drunk and it looked funny as fuck.

flavoral - July 13, 2019, 8:00 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:46 AM)Spaark Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Unlike us, most adults don't spend shitloads of time on the internet. Kids do... kinda sucks for us as the most popular content is often babyfood. Also, there are still a lot of content targeted toward adults. I personally just have a small list of channels I watch.

Spaark - July 13, 2019, 8:02 am

(Jul 13, 2019 08:00 AM)flavoral Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Also, there are still a lot of content targeted toward adults. I personally just have a small list of channels I watch.

Oh ofcourse. I personally find Half As Interesting really good + some twitch stuff like Forsen.

flavoral - July 13, 2019, 8:03 am

(Jul 13, 2019 08:00 AM)Spaark Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Idk about you flavoral, but I have never brought YouTuber merchandise :')

was considering something from pewdiepie because he actually has half a clue in terms of fashion norms... but otherwise i don't see why i'd want to be a walking billboard for some random internet celebrity. They're really not that famous.

edit: I did buy a forsen tshirt, but its because I was quite drunk and it looked funny as fugg. Same I've never bought anyone's merch. However, i've only thought to buy merch from 2 channels, cuz i really liked the minimal design and i hate the type of merch there's a lot going on in them.

(Jul 13, 2019 08:02 AM)Spaark Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Oh ofcourse. I personally find Half As Interesting really good + some twitch stuff like Forsen.

I currently mostly prefer to watch/listen to long podcast interviews as I can listen to them in the background while working on other stuff.

4158996621556 - July 13, 2019, 8:14 am

(Jul 13, 2019 07:49 AM)Burnham Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Yes, that is basically how the tutorials are. So what do you use alternatively? I think that blogs also have some times crappy content with the correct keywords just to draw you in and make money from ad impressions. Usually, I find quality content on Reddit, Quora and forums but sometimes I need fully detailed guides and not just tips. What do you use most of the times when trying to learn something new?

reddit almost never failed me...if i look for help there, then i almost always find it. because someone definitely had the same problem in the past, and someone definitely knows how to fix it. plus the upvote system is basically "natural selection" for selecting good tips/fixes and hiding the useless stuff.

if your problem is related to something very niche then usually there's usually a blog/forum dedicated to it with very high quality tutorials so i cant suggest you a specific website unless i know which subjects you would need the tutorials to be on...

if its something about "how to fix a car engine" then obviously youtube is the best bet because of the VISUAL aspect, seeing it being done is a lot better than just reading a random post. but for stuff like "how to fix blue screen error H4CK1NG_D0G3" then reddit works just fine...

if yt is ur only option and ure in a time rush then: 1.25x , press the button 2 on your keyboard. see if tutorial started, if not, press 3, until it starts. so u skip the useless content that usually is used to fill the start of the video. works fine

Dorrance - July 13, 2019, 8:15 am

It's to keep the video duration longer to keep that traffic going. It's all the ways to keep that YT money coming in.

Mix - July 13, 2019, 9:22 am yes, they try and space out videos to get more ads and view time. not just you my friend it's so they can make the most of it.

Condasoftware - July 13, 2019, 9:26 am

This guy is probably the worst for talking slowly, it's almost like his voice's playback speed is slowed down.

[Video: <https://youtu.be/Jnei1md-Ia0>]

4158996621556 - July 13, 2019, 9:30 am

(Jul 13, 2019 09:26 AM)Condasoft Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This guy is probably the worst for talking slowly, it's almost like his voice's playback speed is slowed down.

[Video: <https://youtu.be/Jnei1md-Ia0>]

lets not forget his best performance to date

dont tell me "i hate youtubers they talk so slow" until u've watched this vid in its entirety

James Burnham - July 13, 2019, 9:35 am

(Jul 13, 2019 09:30 AM)HackingDoge Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) lets not forget his best performance to date

dont tell me "i hate youtubers they talk so slow" until u've watched this vid in its entirety
This is what happens when you tell kids at schools that they have to reach a word minimum.

Condasoft - July 13, 2019, 9:35 am

(Jul 13, 2019 09:30 AM)HackingDoge Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) lets not forget his best performance to date

dont tell me "i hate youtubers they talk so slow" until u've watched this vid in its entirety
I never did like burger king...

Gumbo - September 2, 2019, 12:25 am i believe the vids need to hit a certain amount of time to be ad friendly etc so if you doing some dumb task of course u gonna stretch it out to hit that mark.

Dead Presidents - September 2, 2019, 3:25 pm

I don't know. I always watch youtube at 1.75 speed.

fun tela - September 2, 2019, 3:50 pm

(Jul 13, 2019 07:21 AM)Burnham Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I am watching most tutorial videos at 1.25x because at 1.00 they are too casual and slow. What about you?

It's all about the money bruh

Zan - September 3, 2019, 12:03 am

Longer video means more advertisements which means more money. They are just doing their job.

Select - September 3, 2019, 12:04 am

Whats a video example of one? Let me see

Deany - September 3, 2019, 12:05 am

Chills the horror video guy does this lol